Meeting in Interest of the Blind

The Princess Anne Society for the improvement of the condition of the blind had a very interesting meeting Friday night at the Court House. Judge Stanford presided and was re-elected president for the year. Mr. Arthur Powell was made secretary and treasurer, in the place of Miss Nancy Page, who declined re-election.

The main object of the society is the amelioration of the condition of the blind especially those of our own county. Two ladies connected with the Maryland School for the Blind were present. Miss Kelley, who is well known in this community, gave a most interesting talk on their work. Miss Cavanaugh who accompanied her, is to remain on the Eastern Shore, to do home teaching for the blind. Her assignments until Dec. 15th are for Crisfield, Pocomoke and Princess Anne. She will go directly to homes of the blind, teach them the use of the blind type and instruct them in any useful occupation which they may be able to undertake.

There are four blind in this vicinity and two in Dames Quarter.

The familiarity with the blind type will give these people the enjoyment of the excellent magazine which is sent free to every blind person in the United States.

Miss Cavanaugh is herself deprived of sight but has mastered almost every branch of activity open to the blind. She is therefore peculiarly fitted to give aid to those as unfortunate as herself. She will be in Princess Anne Mondays and Tuesdays of each week and people of the town will have an opportunity to extend their sympathetic courtesy to one bringing aid and comfort to those who walk in darkness.

The Electric Railway Hearing

The promoters of the proposed railway line from Deal's Island to Snow Hill will be given a hearing before the Public Service Commission of Maryland, at its office in Baltimore, next Monday, October 27th, at noon, upon their application for permission and authority to issue stock and bonds, each to the amount of $1,000,000. This hearing will be an important epoch in the history of the Eastern Shore Power, Light and Railway Company and upon the decision of the Commission will depend the further prosecution of the project.

The friends of the enterprise urge as many citizens as possible of the two counties specially interested to be present at the hearing, not only for the purpose of showing local interest but also to aid in setting forth substantial reasons for the road's construction and meeting objections that may be made. The company will be represented before the Commission by Hon. Joshua W. Miles.

Next Tuesday, October 28th, is the last day on which you can register. If you are not registered you cannot vote for the election of Wilson and Marshall, and for the re-election of Congressman Covington.

The rainfall throughout the State last week has been the heaviest in the 41 years of the weather bureau service. More than 5 1/2 inches of rain fell in one day.

MONEY FOR NOMINATIONS

Flower Day for the Blind

October 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th will be celebrated throughout the State as Flower Days for the benefit of the Maryland Workshop for the Blind.

The object of the Maryland Workshop for the Blind is to make the blind of our State independent rather than dependent, therefore trades are taught both to the men and women, and they are compensated for their labor. In being given occupation it is a great blessing, but as there is compensation, a blind person realizes that they are, to a certain extent, assisting in making a living, and any one that will assist in such a cause, indicate that they have love in their hearts for those that are afflicted, and that they are grateful for the blessing of vision that they enjoy.

The Maryland Workshop for the Blind is exceedingly anxious to wipe out a debt of $50,000 for the purchase of a building and equipment, and only $5,000 is required to cancel the indebtedness.

On October 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th, it requested that every person that is interested in the work will wear a flower and if it cannot be purchased from one of their representatives, that the party securing the flower will lay aside an amount equal to the gratitude that they feel, and their ability to give, and forward them to the treasurer, or they can be mailed direct to Mr. George R. Bellows, Manager, Western Newspaper Union, 414 Water Street, Baltimore, Md.

Ruggler, Baltimore; B. Powell Morrison, Baltimore; and F. E. Schnepte, Centreville.

K. of P. Supreme Lodge Loses

In a decision rendered in United States Court at Utica, N. Y., last week, Judge Ray holds that the Supreme Lodge, Knights of Pythias, has no right to increase the assessment of an insured member.

Arthur V. H. Smith, of Montgomery county, refused to pay the increase asked in the assessment for insurance. He had a policy bearing date of October 26, 1899, for $3,000 and called for a monthly assessment of $3. In 1902 he was directed to pay $4.80, and did so. Last January his assessment was raised to $14.70 and his tender of the original amount was refused on order from the Supreme Lodge.

He took the matter into the Supreme Court and it was removed to the United States Court with the result that Judge Ray has decided that the Supreme Lodge must accept the original premium.

Court adjourned Thursday night after a session of but four days.

On Almshouse—W. J. Wharton, H. D. Ford, S. Cooper-Tyler, committee.

"Upon thorough examination we find the condition of the premises good in every respect, and the inmates properly cared for and expressing themselves well satisfied, and having no cause for complaint. We find ten inmates, all colored, in the insane ward, three women and seven men; in the almshouse, four white women, one baby, three white men, one colored man and four colored women, making a grand total of twenty-three. We find two mules, one wagon, one horse cart, one cow, six killing hogs and one sow and four pigs; also about one hundred bushels of wheat, ten barrels of potatoes, (round), thirteen acres in corn, sixteen stacks of fodder, eight tons of hay and one acre of sweet potatoes."

On Court House and Jail—the same committee:

"Upon thorough examination of the jail proper we find the same in good shape, clean and sanitary. We find five prisoners, all colored, who expressed themselves as well cared for and no complaint to offer. In the jailer's department downstairs we find several locks out of order, and the stable and wood-house outside practically falling down, hardly fit for use, especially this wood shed, as no fuel can be kept dry. We find the Court House and premises in splendid condition."

League Asks For $25,000

The headquarters committee of the Antislavery League has made an appeal for contributions of $25,000 with which to conduct its campaign in Maryland during this and next year. The members of the committee are Jonathan K. Taylor, David H. Carroll, Henry S. Dunaway, Daniel Baker, Charles W. Dorsey, William F. Cochran and J. F. Heisse, chairman.

The members of the Committee have themselves subscribed $10,000, provided the rest of the State will subscribe $15,000 more, over and above the contribution at church services, for a fund to be used between now and the legislative election next fall in the educational and organization work necessary to insure the nomination, election and organization of a Legislature which will pass the local option bill.

DR. ELIOT IS FOR WILSON

Says Governor Possesses Qualities Needed in a President

Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, has sent to the New York Times a letter discussing the great issues of the Presidential campaign and setting forth the reasons why he favors the election of Governor Woodrow Wilson. In part the letter says:

"Since all social changes have industrial and political consequences, social reforms, like industrial, can be safely effected by the method of cautious experiment with adequate notice, and not by the sudden impetus rush of an emotional multitude. The education of a new generation is often needed to give such reforms satisfactory effect."

"The Democratic party's platform and candidates, while less conservative than the Republican, hold out more hope or expectation of a wise, dealing with the reforms proposed than the Progressive party does. In particular the published sayings of Governor Wilson are much more prudent and measured in regard to the proposed changes than those of ex-President Roosevelt. Indeed, Governor Wilson's temperament, knowledge and experience fit him to deal wisely, as President of the United States, with all these philanthropic projects."

"The coming troublous years will call for fairness, sober judgment and quiet resolution in the executive head of the Government. Governor Wilson's career gives many indications that he possesses these qualities. Through 30 years of public life ex-President Roosevelt has proved to the American people that these are not his characteristics."

Plant Good Seed Wheat

Another important thing just now for the farmer to do is to attend to his seed wheat.

He may get his ground in first class order and condition, apply sufficient fertilizer (without filler) and seed his field in good time, but if his seed comes from a ten bushel yield of small grains of wheat with garlic or cockle, his yield for next year will be disappointing. He must remember that the labor on a thirty bushel yield is no greater than on a ten bushel yield except the cost of threshing. If you have no fan or screen at home it will pay to take seed to the nearest miller and get him to handle it same as for grinding.

If you want to buy seed wheat, consult with Experiment Station at College Park, giving them the character of the soil and location and they will try to put you in touch with those who have suitable seed for sale. With regard to the proper selection of seed corn, the girls can assist as well as the boys, and the girls' clubs should get started in securing tomato and other seeds for next season.

The girls' clubs in the public schools are intended to give the girls the benefit of some outdoor work, bring them closer to nature by studying plant life and then follow with instruction in canning and carry the teaching of economics into the home and so ennoble the daily round and common task, which will help bring delight to the mother, and in many cases cement closer relations and fellowship between mother and daughter.

President Taft Makes Promises

The New York Evening World published an interview with President Taft, in which the President goes at length into some of the current issues of the campaign.

The President promises a revision of the tariff on a scientific basis, so far as may be necessary to keep prices from being exorbitant. This may be done by the continuance of the Tariff Board's investigation into the facts, the President is quoted as saying. The President hints at an extra tariff revision session in case the Republicans should be in control of the next Congress. Referring to the high cost of living, the President expressed the opinion that American workmen are very much better off than the workmen of Europe. Not only are they able to pay the high cost of living, he says, but they could also put something aside for a rainy day. The Payne Tariff law had no more to do with advancing the high cost of living than the latest Atlantic cable tariff, he declares.

Referring to woman suffrage the President says this issue would have to be decided by the various States and that he believed women to be as capable of a wise use of the ballot as men.

In the matter of the recall of Judges the President says he regards the maintenance of an independent judiciary as a supreme issue and that the recall applied to Judges would tend to deprive the public of Judges of ability, character and a high sense of duty.

MARSHALL NOT AFRAID

The Vice-Presidential Candidate Willing to Speak in Baltimore Not Liked by Anderson

Governor Marshall, of Indiana, Democratic candidate for Vice President, is one man who is not afraid of W. H. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Maryland. He is willing to come to Maryland and to speak in Baltimore despite the opposition of Mr. Anderson to him because, according to the Anti-Saloon League superintendent, he is a "friend of the liquor interests."

A letter was read from Governor Marshall at the meeting last Tuesday afternoon at the executive committee of the Democratic Auxiliary Committee in Baltimore. Governor Marshall said that, while anxious to accept the invitation of Maryland Democrats to speak there, his engagements during the campaign are in the hands of the National Committee.

There was really no quorum, but the committee decided to indulge in formal discussion of the business before it. This discussion applied for the most part to the ways and means of the campaign. Plans were made to send out appeals to leading Democrats for contributions.

James E. Wheeler, president of the Commonwealth Bank, was suggested as the probable successor of Joshua W. Miles as vice chairman of the committee. Mr. Miles succeeded the late George C. Morrison as chairman. He has not yet been formally elected. It is claimed that he automatically succeeded Mr. Morrison when the vacancy in the chairmanship occurred.

It was decided that Chairman Miles or Senator Lee should be constantly on duty at the committee's headquarters. The weekly meetings of the committee will hereafter be held on Monday. The spellbinding program will begin during the second week in October. On motion Congressman Talbot, former Attorney General Straus was elected counsel to the committee.

Members of the committee present were Chairman Miles, Senator Lee, Congressman Talbot, George N. Nimsen, W. Cabell Bruce, Howard Isaac and Gen. Murray Vandiver. J. McK. Trippe, speaker of the last House of Delegates and chairman of the Champ Clark committee during the presidential campaign, was also present.

Chairman Miles, of the committee, has been appointed a member of the finance committee of the national committee for the state. Ex-Governor Warfield is chairman of this committee. The other members of the committee are former Governor Frank Brown, Senator John Walter Smith, Senator Blair Lee, Archibald H. Taylor, William L. Marbury, S. Davies Warfield, Isaac E. Emerson, W. Cabell Bruce and John S. Armstrong.

Court Upholds Race Men

In the Circuit Court at Belair last Tuesday Judge W. H. Harlan, after hearing argument for several hours, granted an injunction restraining the Sheriff of Harford county from interfering with bookmaking and pool selling at the Havre de Grace race track.

The Court did not pass upon some of the questions raised by legal representatives of the State and based its order solely upon the fact that, as a de facto body, acts of the Racing Commission of the county in dealing with third parties should be recognized as binding.

As a result of the injunction, racing and bookmaking at Havre de Grace continued until the end of the present racing season yesterday, Monday.

Judge Harlan's opinion in granting race men's injunction is as follows:

"This is an application for an injunction to restrain the defendant from interfering with the plaintiff's rights under a license granted to it by the Harford County Racing Commission, under the act of 1912, Chapter 132.

"This Court has nothing to do with the wisdom of this legislation. The Legislature has seen fit to enact it, and it has been duly approved, and full force must be given to it until in a proper manner its validity is brought into question and passed upon, and in my judgment this cannot be done under this proceeding.

"Nor ought the Court to pass upon the status of the Racing Commission under this bill, which is against the Sheriff alone.

"This commission for months has been professing to act as a valid body, without objection on the part of anyone, and it has openly issued, under the terms of the act, a license to the plaintiff.

"In the judgment of this Court, the body is at least a de facto one, and its acts are valid as regards third parties and it must be sustained. If there are objections to the law, or the legal status of the commission, there is a proper and orderly method of having those questions determined.

"As the case is presented to me, I shall direct an injunction to issue, in accordance with the prayer of the bill."

PRICE-ANDERSON DEBATE

Big Tent Filled Till Sides Bulge. Sentiment Favors Price

The great debate between Jesse D. Price, president of the State Senate of Maryland, and W. H. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, came off according to schedule at Salisbury last Friday in the presence of an immense crowd, representing not only Wicomico but many other counties of the State.

It was the most exciting event Salisbury has had in years. For days and weeks scarcely anything else had been the topic of general conversation. The general expression seemed to be that Price had the better of the battle, Salisbury being the Senator's home town and considerable sympathy attaching to him for that reason.

Price's friends throughout the county are jubilant in proclaiming him the victor, and in asserting that he has vindicated himself from the charges made by Mr. Anderson that he had betrayed his constituency and defeated the Local Option bill at the behest of the Mahon liquor city ring.

In the minds of Mr. Price's adherents there is no question as to the result of the debate, and he is hailed as having more firmly established himself politically in the county than ever before, having, it is held, disposed of every charge made against him.

The following statements were given out by the two debaters at a late hour Friday night:

Mr. Anderson: "I am amazed at the change in public sentiment already. I knew that we were certain to win in the long run, but fully expected that it would take some time to soak in. By compelling Senator Price to stand up and openly declare his opposition to the Local Option bill, when he had previously been claiming to be a temperance man, and by establishing his connection with the city liquor ring as demonstrated by the speeches made in his behalf by the three Democratic city ring Senators, we have made it impossible for Senator Price to 'come back' politically. It was one of these cases where he stood to lose in any event, because in order to make a pretense of refuting my arguments it was necessary for him to put himself clearly in opposition to the moral sentiment of his county."

"He does not realize now, but it will soon become apparent even to Senator Price that today marks the beginning of the end of his political power."

Mr. Price: "I did not seek this controversy and avoided it for the reason stated in my speech—that I thought it improper and likely to injure the temperance cause. But I have always felt that my record accorded with the wishes of a majority of my constituents and have never felt the slightest doubt of my ability to square with this without difficulty when it was properly understood by the people. I feel tonight, from the expressions of friends, that such has been the case and that I have been thoroughly vindicated in the minds of 99 per cent. of those with whom I have come in contact. I have no feeling or bitterness toward Mr. Anderson or anyone and shall continue to do my duty in the future as I have done it in the past."

Auto Crash Cuts Throat

His throat cut from ear to ear when he catapulted through the glass wind shield of Dr. Potter's automobile, George Washburne, of Fruitland, was taken to the Peninsula General Hospital, Monday afternoon of last week, and died from his injuries Wednesday night. He was 21 years of age and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Washburne, of Fruitland.

Washburne was racing with another young man on a bicycle, and they were both turning the corner of Main and Fitzwater streets, Salisbury, as the Doctor was turning it in the opposite direction, hurrying at high speed to a patient. The result was a head-on collision, throwing Washburne through the wind shield and severing the main facial artery and cutting his throat nearly from ear to ear. Had it not been for the prompt action of Dr. Potter in stopping the flow of blood Washburne would have been dead in a few minutes. The Doctor then took him to the hospital.

Two Trains Ditched

The early passenger train from King's Creek to Crisfield collided head-on with an extra freight going north in a strip of woods on a sharp curve a quarter of a mile this side of Kingston station last Wednesday morning. Both engine drivers were unable to see the approaching trains because of the dense pine woodland at the curve. Both trains were badly wrecked and one of engineers was severely injured. The extra freight took a chance for the Kingston siding from Marion. Both trains were ditched. An engine ran out of Crisfield and took the passengers and mail to Crisfield at noon.

The Lady of the Mount

by FREDERIC S. ISNAM
AUTHOR OF "THE STROLLERS," "UNDER THE ROSE," ETC.
ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WATERS

CHAPTER XXIX.

The Marquis intervenes. The evening of the same day, his Excellency, in the seclusion of a small private chamber adjoining the salle du gouvernement, stood looking down at his desk on which were strewn papers and messages containing the latest news from Paris and received at the Mount but a few hours before. That the character of this information, political and social, was little to his liking, seemed manifest from his manner; he stared at the missives resentfully; then frowned and threw down the pen he had been using to mark, or make note of, their contents.

"Versailles—a mob! Sugar-plums to placate them! Sugar-plums!" he repeated; and, impatiently turning away, walked to the window. There for some time he stood peering out, when, the current of his thoughts slowly changing, he took from his pocket a watch, and examined the jeweled face. "Time they were back!" About to return to his table and task, a loud knocking arrested the impulse, and testily the Governor called out; glanced toward the threshold and surveyed the intruder.

"A message from the commandant, your Excellency!" said the man, a trooper of the Mount, with a respectful, though nervous salute.

"Why," returned the Governor in a dry tone, "didn't he bring it himself?" "Because," the trooper shifted; looked away; "because Monsieur le Commandant is engaged in scouring the country for miscreants, your Excellency."

"Miscreants!" sharply. "What miscreants?"

"Monsieur le Commandant hopes to overtake those who have carried off the Lady Elise," said the messenger hurriedly, in the tone of one anxious to be done with his task.

"Carried off!" The thin figure wavered as if struck by a cold breath. "Carried off!" he repeated, laying his hand on the back of the chair.

"By a band of the Black Seigneur's men! His lordship, the Marquis, left behind bound and secured, but the Lady Elise they took with them."

For some time his Excellency said nothing; like a ghost of himself, leaned hard against his support and looked at the trooper.

"But how could it have happened?" at length in a voice, low, intense, he inquired. "Monsieur le Commandant! The guard—you all are alive?"

Stumblingly, as best he could, the soldier explained, and when he had done, his Excellency made no sign that he had heard.

"Monsieur le Commandant further ordered me to say he had no doubt he would return with the Lady Elise," added the messenger hastily.

"Monsieur le Commandant!" The Governor's eyes suddenly blazed; swiftly he put question after question, and, having probed to the core the consistency of the tale, with a gesture, brusque and contemptuous, dismissed the bearer.

But whatever feeling the lord of the Mount might entertain toward his chief officer, no course at the moment seemed open save to await the return of that person and the Marquis. So, curbing his impatience as best he might, his Excellency kept vigil; and not alone! Tidings of what had happened spread at the top of the rock; sifted through closed gates and thick walls into the town. The late arrival at the Mount of the lords and ladies, companions of the Governor's daughter for the day, but added to the questionings of the multitude. All night life and expectancy reigned; lights gleamed from high places; responded in low ones.

"Is it true, my dear, what we hear about the Lady Elise?" the landlady of the inn on the Mount near the strand called out to a stalwart, dark young woman, hurrying down the narrow way shortly after the Paris contingent had gone up.

"I have heard no more than you have," came the curt answer of this person—none other than Nanette—who carried a small bundle and seemed anxious to move on.

"Oh, I didn't know but you came from the palace!" observed the mistress of the inn, and returned to her customers, drinking and nodding with heads close together.

On the morrow, however, all doubts were removed and speculations put at rest; for hardly had the sun set its seal in the sky than from the forests the appearance of a body of troops rewarded the watchers. From hovel to hut the word went, and men, women and children, unkempt and curious, ran down to the beach to await the approach of the guard. Proudly had it departed, with waving of plumes; slowly it returned, a bedraggled procession of staggering horses and heavy-eyed men. Had it come back a little earlier, the dark might have kept the truth from the people; now the pitiless red glare revealed to the full the plight of the troopers. It told, too, the disappointment of Monsieur le Commandant, who looked neither to the right nor to the left; and the despair of the Marquis, pale counterfaced as his dearest self.

"her ladyship! They haven't brought her back!" Low murmurs arose; grew louder; some one laughed. But suddenly, without answer, the soldiers dragged by, into the town, and laboriously up to the top of the Mount.

At the gate his Excellency waited; cast one glance at the company—their leader—and silently turned. Later, however, was he closeted with both the commandant and the Marquis—a brief period with the former who departed, carrying a look eloquent of the unpleasantness of the interview.

"And now," said the Governor in tones somewhat strained, as the officer's dejected footfall died in the distance, "we've got rid of that dolt, let us consider, my Lord, the purport of this outrage."

"Purport?" repeated the Marquis petulantly, stretching his stiff legs. "Did they not tell me that if anything happened to the Black Seigneur, they would hold her, Elise, answerable for it? You see they had learned," bitterly, "of your intention to hang him after the wedding!"

"From which you infer?" "They will keep her as hostage! Indeed, they said as much, when—" "They bound you, my Lord?"

The color came to the young man's face. "It was a trap," he said, his voice pitched higher; "and they came prepared, not for one man, but the guard!"

"Still it was very ill-advised—a great mistake—to have taken the shorter way through the forest alone."

"The proposal did not originate with me! Elise suggested it. She seemed in a wild, headstrong mood; nothing would stop her. Now," moodily he rose, "mon dieu! What has she brought upon herself? Where is she now?"

His Excellency did not stir; his face, like a pale mask, was turned aside. "I do not think," he said slowly, as arguing to convince himself, "she is in any immediate danger."

But my lord caught irritably at the word. "No danger! She is surrounded by it. And we? What are we to do? Sit idly here? Give me a ship, your Excellency, and I will follow the boat of this Black Seigneur, and when I find it, force them to—"

"What?" The Governor's eyes swerved dully. "Have you forgotten their threat? Their last words to you that if we attempted to follow, to rescue—that, rather than give her up—"

"They would not dare!" cried my lord with sparkling glance.

But his Excellency shook his head. "No; no; it won't do! And now," again looking away, "leave me, my Lord, to consider." With which, the interview, as unsatisfactory to the one as the other, terminated.

Several days that passed, were not calculated either to alleviate his Excellency's anxiety, or the Marquis' impatience; for during that period of waiting came no word of my lady, or news of her captors. Mysteriously as a phantom ship had the boat that had carried the Governor's daughter away appeared on the coast and vanished, and from none of the Governor's vessels, or any of the fishing craft could be gleaned information of its whereabouts. My lord, the Marquis, annoyed at what seemed but fruitless delay; was still for setting forth and inviting battle; but of this his Excellency would not hear, arguing, no doubt, to himself that in temporizing lay greater assurance of safety to his daughter than in precipitate action. So the situation grew hourly more trying, until—as if it already were not intolerable enough!—a new concern added ironical weight to present perplexities.

My young lord, between whom and the master of the Mount had been growing a more strained relationship, sought the Governor one day, and, in excited tones, announced he had just learned that the prisoner, the Black Seigneur, was ill and probably would survive but a short time longer in the dungeon where he was confined. As his Excellency knew, the fellow had been wounded, and now with scanty nourishment, want of air, and close quarters, was generally in a bad way.

His Excellency heard; moistened his lips and seemed about to speak, but was silent, while more anxiously the young man went on. Of course under different conditions, with care and attention—a well-lighted room and excellent food—they might hope to restore their prisoner's strength; at least, preserve for a time one so precious to themselves, upon the thread of whose life hung my lady's!

His Excellency still answered no word; only looked down, and, knitting his brows, the young nobleman restlessly waited. At length, with an expression on his face the Marquis had never before seen there, his Excellency rose, moved like an automaton to the bell, and called for the jailer.

"Monsieur le Marquis has a few instructions to give you." The Governor's voice, but a breath, told what the words cost him.

The man responded gravely, looking from one to the other.

"Use your own judgment in the matter, my Lord," went on his Excellency, and left them together.

After that, a change, subtle but deep-rooted, came over the Governor; a silent man always, now his taciturnity became most marked. Under stress of untoward circumstances, all the guests at the Mount, save the young noble, departed; but his Excellency appeared hardly to notice their going; drawing his cloak of reserve closer about him; seemed only to ask for that solitude, not difficult to find in his aerial kingdom. Sometimes for a long while he would stand in the cloister, gazing seaward; again wander in the church, look at the monuments, always to pass one of them quickly. Only on a single occasion, when the Marquis, who was daily becoming more nervous, sought him, with a favorable report of his prisoner-patient, did the Governor give sign that beneath this apparent apathy yet stirred malevolence and rancor.

"Yes, yes," he returned, a spark of ill-concealed venom in his glance; "he is doing well, no doubt! I am sure he will do well. But well or ill, I wish to hear no more of him! No more, Monsieur le Marquis!" His voice vibrated; surprised, the kinsman of the King stared, then stiffly turned away.

No matters stood, when one day, alone in the cloister, his Excellency was disturbed by a rough-looking fellow who brought a letter and said he would await the reply at the tavern in the town.

Deliberately the Governor took the missive, tore open the envelope, and surveyed the small bit of paper it contained. Whatever the brief message told him, his Excellency's face did not change, and he was still coldly, carefully studying sentences and words, after his fashion, when through the door my lord, the Marquis, stepped in some haste. Lifting his eyes, the Governor had no difficulty in reading the question on the young man's countenance. For a moment they looked at each other, and then the long, white fingers of his Excellency again sought the letter.

"They," his voice seemed to drip the words, "propose an exchange of prisoners, and give me three days to consent to it!"

CHAPTER XXX.

A Sound Afar.

About midway in the curve of one of the numerous bays, marking the coastline, and several hours distant from the Mount, stands a stone cross erected by an English marauder to indicate the place of his landing. The symbol is visible on all sides from afar, for before it, are the sands and the sea, and behind stretches the land barren of wood—low, level, covered only with marsh grass. Toward this monument of man's conquest—most prominent object in a prospect, dreary and monotonous—rode, late one afternoon, a band of horsemen. At their head galloped my lord, the Marquis; in the center could be seen a man with bound arms whose horse was led by one of the others. This person—a prisoner, thin, haggard, yet still muscular of frame—from time to time gazed about; a look of inquiry or calculation in the black undaunted eyes.

"What prison are you taking me to now?" once he asked the trooper who held the reins of his horse. "And why do you go in this direction? Is it you dare not ride along main highways on account of the people?"

"Never you mind!" came the gruff answer. "And as for the people, they'd better look out!"

"Bah!" laughed the prisoner. "You can put some of them in cells, but not all!"

"There may be something worse than a cell waiting for you!" was the malicious retort.

"No doubt!" said the other stolidly. But as his eyes again swept the horizon, from the opposite direction appeared another band of riders. At first the prisoner, regarding them, looked puzzled; then as the newcomers rode straight and rapidly on toward the cross, his countenance expressed a faint understanding. A fresh relay of men, he concluded; one his present guard would consign him to, and then themselves return to the Mount. Still was the meeting-place odd one, and the demeanor of the

Let Every Democrat Help

Hon. Blair Lee, Treasurer of the Auxiliary Committee of the Democratic State Central Committee, with Headquarters at the Royal Arcanum Building, Baltimore, is sending out appeals to Democrats throughout the State, for subscriptions to the Woodrow Wilson Campaign Fund.

In Somerset county he is making special appeals for SUBSCRIPTIONS OF ONE DOLLAR, or more if the subscriber feels himself able to increase the amount. This appeal places what has been aptly called the Wilson "Roll of Honor," within the reach of almost every voter. Let Somerset county make a generous response to this call from Mr. Lee, and in this way show that our people are in sympathy with the new idea of popular subscriptions to defray the legitimate expenses of the People's Candidate for President, rather than with the old plan of making appeals to the "Big Interests."

A Short Term of Court

The September term of the Circuit Court for Somerset County was of short duration having lasted but four days. The grand jury was discharged on Wednesday morning, having completed its investigations in two days. This is a good showing and reflects credit upon the Court and its officials.

Short terms of court and the decreased expense therefrom are always gratifying to tax-payers. In this case the showing is improved by the fact that practically one day of the term was spent in trying a case removed from Wicomico county, the expense of which will be borne by that county. It is true that a number of cases on the docket were continued and the April term may be somewhat prolonged. That bridge, however, will be crossed when it is reached.

It is agreeable at this time to note that our judges are men of determination and that they do not permit expensive and unnecessary delays in the dispatch of public business. It is also a pleasure to note the improved methods practiced by the grand jury in quickly hearing relevant testimony and sifting out such as is unimportant. The saving of money for the county is an important matter and the men who assist in saving it deserve commendation.

The Farce at Havre de Grace

As was expected, the attempt of Governor Goldsborough of Maryland to stop betting at the Havre de Grace race track resulted in complete failure.
Fortified by the law which extends the privilege of bookmaking to the association in charge of the races, the bookmakers continued their work as usual and defied the official agents of the governor to stop them. Fifty policemen sent from Baltimore to enforce the governor's order did nothing, while the sheriff of Harford county refused to take action, or even to accept the Baltimore policemen as his deputies, because the State's attorney for the county gave him no directions to this effect. Finally, the controversy found its way into the Harford county court, and to whatever move may be made there the racing association has interposed a motion for an injunction to prevent any interference with the racing and book-making until after the close of the meeting, September 30.

Governor Goldsborough would have done himself more credit had he declined to take any action towards closing the race track at Havre de Grace. The time for action on his part was when the bill authorizing the race meeting and betting, under the guise of a movement to promote horse racing was before him. He had the opportunity of killing the scheme by a veto, but instead he gave life to the measure by signing it. To claim that he was then deceived seems foolish now and the only thing to do is to make the best of the situation until the law can be repealed.—Wilmington Evening News.

Notice to Democrats

Registration days this year will be as follows:

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1st,
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 8th.

On these two days transfers from one district to another will be given and registered voters will be placed on the books. This is not a new registration, but every Democrat who has moved from his last residence since last registration day into another district, must get a transfer from his old voting district and register in his new district where he is now living.
This must be attended to on one of the above dates or your name may be erased from the voting lists. Every young Democrat who has become of age since last election should register on one of the above days in October.

A Great Victory for Wilson

Hughes' victory over "Jim" Smith New Jersey is an indication that the people of that State, having put their hand to the good-government plow, are not disposed to turn back.
It is a characteristic of reform movements that they are subject to periods of reaction. A victory is followed by a defeat, and while the pendulum never swings back quite as far as it was in the first place, still it does swing back. Yet in New Jersey Wilson's election as Governor, which was the first sign visible of the reform movement there, was followed by the defeat of Smith for Senator, by the election of Wilson delegates to the National Convention and by this second defeat of Smith—and there has been no reaction.

The credit for this unquestionably belongs to Governor Wilson, not primarily because he lifted his voice against Smith and what Smith stands for, but because he has made a record in the office of Governor that gives weight to his words.
The slightest disappointment over Wilson's course in office would have given great impetus to the wave of reaction.
But instead of disappointment, there has been nothing but satisfaction. Wilson has made as good a Governor as he will make a good President.—Baltimore Evening Sun.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear.
There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies.
Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tuber restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's

Our Splendid Fleet

The assembling of the Atlantic fleet in New York Bay during the second week of October will constitute the most impressive naval display ever seen in American waters. There will be 127 ships in the reviewing line, and in this lineup there will be thirty-two battleships, not all of dreadnought classification, but each a weighty proposition in the naval set-to. The armored cruisers will greatly extend the line of powerful fighters. President Taft will review this magnificent array of fighting ships on October 15th.

Comparisons between naval powers are often drawn, but it is difficult to draw reliable conclusions as to whether the American or German Navy at present follows in rank the British Navy. In battleships of the first class, the American and German Navies are nearly matched. In armored cruisers of the first class the United States has fifteen, as against Germany's nine. But Germany has fine cruiser battleships and the United States none, unless those swift battleships recently placed in commission can be so classified. In smaller craft Germany outclasses us, except in the matter of submarines, of which we possess thirty-four to Germany's eight.
It is difficult, however, to estimate the practical potency of any navy, because the most important factor in the equipment of every navy—the efficiency of the officers and the capabilities of the men behind the guns—can only be tested in actual conflict. This is an element of naval strength in which, when put to the practical test, the United States has always scored high.—Baltimore American.

Bryan Predicts Clean Sweep

William J. Bryan entered Nevada last Thursday for three speeches. He passed through Reno on his way to Virginia
City, where he made an address at noon.
At night he made his principal address at Reno.

"I don't concede a single State to either Taft or Roosevelt," said Mr. Bryan.
"Wilson and Marshall will make a clean sweep and will carry every State in the Union."

A Belated Protest

Criticism which is now being voiced against the clause in the Postals appropriation bill passed by the last Congress, requiring newspapers to publish periodical circulation and financial statements as a condition to their enjoyment of postal privileges, should have been made when the legislation was before Congress. At that time it was pointed out in these columns that the proposition was an extraordinary extension of the powers of the Post Office Department and certain to invite vigorous protest on its enforcement.

The necessity for the legislation never has been apparent. It has been assumed that demand for it originated somewhere in the quest for the "Money Trust," upon rumors and demagogic assertions, like those which the Third Term indulges in from time to time, that there is a secret control of the newspaper press of the country. In some specific cases it is said that there has been a lack of responsibility for newspaper publication which afforded warrant for such a law, although libel is a matter of State jurisdiction. The further requirement as to the designation of paid-for advertising matter, while approved as a matter of policy by most newspapers, obviously is an absurdity in national law.

To the great majority of newspapers the law in itself means nothing more than a degree of inconvenience. Most newspapers publish their circulation figures or open them to anyone who is interested, and the secrets as to newspaper ownership that will be betrayed by the workings of this law are very few and not consequential. But something more than the immediate effect of this law is to be considered. If the United States Government, through its Postal Service can exercise such censorship over the press as is measured by this law, how much farther can it go? Is there any limit to the stipulations which can be decreed by appropriation bill riders, or other legislative process, as to what shall or shall not be published in the newspapers? And there is yet a broader question. If the postal privilege can be withdrawn from newspapers as a penalty for the enforcement of regulations which have nothing to do with the postal service, can it not be similarly used as a penal attachment for other laws?

We have gone a long way in the utilization of this police power of the post office department, and, no doubt, with beneficial results, in fraud prosecutions, but there is a danger that it be carried too far. The Department never was intended to be an agency for espionage, or a regulator of the morals of the community. Newspapers that care little or nothing about the specific requirements of this law, will do well to challenge sharply the principle of censorship and interference and misuse of the postal service which is embodied in it.—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Col. Powell to Sue for Debt

Col. William S. Powell, editor of the Ellicott City Times, and who was in charge of the literary bureau at Democratic state headquarters during the campaign last year, has addressed a letter to Chairman Vandiver and other members of the state committee, as well as to former Senator Gorman, who was his party's unsuccessful candidate for governor, and to John F.
O'Mally, Mr. Gorman's political agent during the campaign, notifying them that he will enter suit against each of them on November 6th if his claim of $2,046 is not paid by that time. It is understood that Colonel Powell became personally responsible for expenses incurred in lithographic work and in other work connected with the publicity department of the campaign.

Chairman Vandiver said Tuesday that Colonel Powell was not employed by him during the campaign. He acknowledged that the claim is a part of the indebtedness of the state committee, though he says he or the committee is not responsible for its payment.

Fortunes in Faces

There's often much truth in the saying "her face is her fortune," but it's never said where pimples, skin eruptions, blotches, or other blemishes figure it. Impure blood is back of them all, and shows the need of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They promote health and beauty. Try them. 25 cents at Omar A. Jones' drug store.

A Tremendous Peach Yield

Mr. O. Straughn Lloyd, who is now working for a Boston commission firm, at Lyndonville, N. Y., sends us the following:

On September 10th my peaches were being filed in car lots at this station and not a car in sight and no encouragement offered as to when I should have them. I took the matter up by wire with the Commission at Washington and on the morning of the 11th had 15 cars placed for loading, and have not been short since. The result is, most people have suffered great loss for want of cars, while I have been fortunate enough to be taken care of. I have moved 67 cars of peaches since September 1st and have probably ten more cars in cold storage here to be moved in the next week or ten days. I am now between $3,500 and $4,000 ahead on the deal, which is speaking pretty well in the face of general conditions.

He also sends us a clipping from a paper which shows that the fruit growers in Niagara county, N. Y., are feeding their peaches to their hogs owing to the shortage of cars and that the growers have lost $100,000 by the shortage of cars.

Hospital Managers Borrow $8,000 The board of managers of the Eastern Shore Hospital for indigent insane met last Wednesday morning at Governor Goldsborough's office, in the Union Trust Building, Baltimore, and decided to borrow $8,000 for the purchase of land for it.

Some weeks ago the board agreed to purchase the Kirwan farm, which is less than a mile from Cambridge. The appropriation for the new hospital will not be available until January 1st and thus to close the deal the money will be borrowed.

The members of the board who attended the meeting besides the Governor were State Senators Harper, Beck and Bosley and Comptroller Harrington.

TAXING COAT OFF POOR MAN'S BACK

Concrete Illustrations of What Protective Tariff Really Means.

CAUSE WORKERS TO THINK.

Illegitimacies of the Payne-Aldrich Act, Taft's "Best Law Ever," Strikingly Told in Figures.

Concrete examples of how a protective tariff operates are causing the workman, the "poor man," to do a lot of thinking nowadays. He is beginning to understand whether it is not about time to call a halt on the Republican practice of taxing the coat off his back and threatening him with the loss of his shirt and his socks if he does not submit.

All through the present tariff law, passed by a Republican congress and endorsed by a Republican president as "THE BEST TARIFF BILL EVER PASSED," are to be found discriminations, the higher duty on the cheaper article, the lower duty on the dearer article, thus placing on the shoulders of those least able to bear it the greater burden of the protective system. Here are some illustrations:

The cheapest wool blankets bear a duty of 105.42 per cent; the dearest, 104.55 per cent.

Flannels, not more than 40 cents a pound, are taxed at 143.67 per cent; over 70 cents a pound, 76.37 per cent.

Wool plushes, cheapest, 141.75 per cent; dearest, 95.33 per cent.

Knit fabrics, cheapest, 141 per cent; dearest, 95.53 per cent.

Stockings, worth from $1 to $1.50 a dozen, 76.37 per cent; from $2 to $3, 59 per cent.

Hats and bonnets, worth not over $5 a dozen, 62 per cent; over $20 a dozen, 85 per cent.

Carpets, highest priced, 50 per cent; that used for mats and rugs, 126.88 per cent.

Women's gloves, unlined, 49 per cent; lined, 34 per cent; longest gloves, unlined, 42 per cent; lined, 29 per cent.

Men's gloves, worth less than $3 a dozen, 63.23 per cent; costliest gloves, 14.45 per cent; leather, unlined, 44.58 per cent; lined, 29.50 per cent.

Buckles, cheapest, 77.48 per cent; dearest, 26.33 per cent.

Uncut diamonds bear a 10 per cent duty; imitation diamonds, 20 per cent.

The humble firecracker bears a 97.08 per cent duty, while elaborate fireworks bear but 70 per cent.

Mattings, smaller and cheaper grades, 43 per cent; costlier, 24 per cent.

Watch movements, seven jewels, 66.02 per cent; 11 jewels, 40.41 per cent; 17 jewels, 34.45 per cent.

Underwear, cheapest, 56.90 per cent; dearest, 50 per cent.

Dress goods of wool, cheapest, 105.42 per cent; dearest, 94.13 per cent.

Velvets, cheapest, 105.22 per cent; dearest, 49.55 per cent.

Silk handkerchiefs, cheapest, 77.44 per cent; dearest, 69 per cent.

Scissors, worth 50 cents a dozen, 221 per cent; worth $1.75 a dozen, 46 per cent.

Table knives, fancy grades, 57.40 per cent; bone handled, 69.45 per cent.

Butcher knives, best grades, 52.10 per cent; cheapest grades, 38.55 per cent.

Files, smallest, $1.29 per cent, long, $3.81 per cent.

Shotguns, worth from $5 to $10, 47.67 per cent; worth over $10, 45.46 per cent.

These are only a part of the discriminations, gleaned from a swift scanning of some of the schedules. Reduced to simplest terms, they mean that the poor man is taxed higher than the rich man.

RAVELIN'S MEN FOR WOODROW WILSON.

He Has a Record of Making Good His Promises to Voters.

The traveling man is a live wire. Traveling men are decided factors in olding public sentiment. No other class of men come in more useful contact with the actual conditions of the high cost of living without a corresponding increase in salaries. The traveling man need Governor Wilson for their president because his record is that of making good promises and then honestly fulfilling them. Governor Wilson in his candidacy needs the help of every live traveling man. Every genuinely progressive commercial man who is willing to help Governor Wilson's candidacy is urged to send his name immediately to the Commercial Men's Wilson committee, care organization bureau, Democratic National headquarters, Fifth Avenue Building, New York.

President Taft congratulates the Republicans of Maine on what Chairman Hiles describes as "an old fashioned victory." Another such and Vermont's Rhode Island would go Democratic November.

Those who know and feel for Chairman Hiles say he really isn't to blame for the Republican presidential candidacy announcement that he "is out of titles."

What's a moosette? A third term skabool!

New Experiment Station
Secretary Wilson of the United States Department of Agriculture has decided to establish an experiment station on the Manti National Forest near Ephraim, Utah, for the study of grazing and water protection problems. In fact bids for the construction of the necessary buildings have been received and it is expected to have the station in working order before winter. Already the gathering of observations on the relations of erosion and run-off to the forest cover have begun.

The Manti National Forest was chosen as the site for this experiment station because it offers exceptionally good opportunities for investigating problems of practical value in connection with regulated grazing. Ephraim and other towns in its neighborhood have suffered severely from floods following violent rainstorms in the mountains, and it has already been proved conclusively that the overgrazed condition of areas on which the natural vegetative cover has been seriously altered is responsible for the formation of torrents and the rapid discharge of debris-laden floodwaters. In a recent destructive storm the water ran clear from a part of the watershed which was within the National Forest, and in good condition as a result of well regulated grazing, while from other areas it swept down sand and boulders. One of the objects of the study will be to learn how the maximum of grazing use of Natural Forest land can be obtained without injury to forest reproduction and stream flow.

The National Forests provide range during a part of all of the year for a considerable part of the stock produced in the western States. Approximately one and one-half million head of cattle and horses and seven and one-half million head of sheep and goats occupy the Forest lands each year. These figures do not include nearly three hundred thousand calves and over four million lambs and kids for which permits are not required.

The experts of the Department believe that when the ranges which were denuded by many years of improper use are restored to a normal condition of productivity it will be possible to provide feed for a much larger number of stock without injury to forest growths or watersheds, and both the stockgrower and the consumer of meat products will thus be benefited. Consequently every effort is being made to determine practicable means of regenerating depleted ranges. All of the studies which are about to be initiated have this point in view.

Wrongly Labeled.

The author of "Two Years In the Forbidden City," the Princess Der Ling, was a lady in waiting at the court of the famous empress dowager of China. Her majesty, the princess tells us, had an excellent estimate of herself. "I have often thought," she once confessed, "that I am the most clever woman that ever lived and that others cannot compare with me."

Notwithstanding this favorable opinion, there were interesting lapses in universal knowledge, as when Miss Carl painted her portrait, and her majesty noticed the artist's signature in the corner of the canvas.

"Well, I know foreigners do some funny things," she remarked, "but I think this is about the funniest I ever heard of. Fancy putting her name on my picture. This will naturally convey the impression that it is a portrait of Miss Carl and not a portrait of myself at all."

Even after the princess—who was of western education—had explained, and the empress had consented to allow the signature to remain, she was anything but satisfied.

Don't Be Too Expert.

Having graduated from a business college with honors, the young man thought himself competent to tackle any problem in banking that could be learned without actual experience, but the old clerk knew better.

"Can you make an erasure so neatly that it would take an expert to tell where it had been done?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," said the young man, with conscious pride.

"Well, for heaven's sake don't tell your prospective employer so or you will be looking for a job this time next year," the old clerk said.

"Employers are afraid of too much skill in that direction. It gives such enormous opportunities for fraud that they will fight shy of hiring you."

"I found that out in my young days. I also was an expert with the ink eraser and proudly proclaimed my accomplishment. Finally when I found myself toiling the starvation mark I ceased to boast and have held a good position ever since."—New York Times

MEAN SWEEP FOR WILSON

Democratic Gains in Vermont and Maine Impressive.

OTHER PARTIES IN FLIGHT.

Third Termers to Poll Their Entire Strength From the Rapidly Thinning Republican Ranks—Indications Are That Taft Will Carry but Two States, Roosevelt None.

That the results of the state elections in Vermont and Maine mean a tremendous Democratic victory in November is freely admitted by all except the bitterest partisans. Political experts have done much analyzing, and some claim to have reached novel conclusions. But these facts stand out:

On Monday, Sept. 9, 1912, the Republican and third term parties combined elected William T. Haines governor of Maine over Frederick W. Plaisted, the present Democratic incumbent, by 8,023 plurality; in 1908, a presidential year, a Republican was elected governor by 7,653 plurality; in 1904 the plurality was 25,800, and in 1900 it was 34,132. In other words, in twelve years the Democrats have cut down the Republican plurality in state elections by 31,109.

In this period the Democratic vote has increased from 39,000 to 68,000, whereas the Republican vote has decreased from 74,000 to 71,000. The Democratic vote of this year exceeds that of September, 1908, by 1,000, but the Republican vote is about 2,000 less than that party cast four years ago.

The split in the Republican ranks, following the election of William T. Haines, is pronounced. If the division in Maine in November is as it was in the recent Vermont election six-tenths of the Republican vote will go for Taft, three-tenths for Roosevelt and one-tenth for the Democrats. It is significant that the latter party has to date suffered no losses, as compared with the vote in previous years, from the third term movement. On the contrary, it has gained. The result in Maine may be expected to be something like this: Wilson, 74,000; Taft, 42,600; Roosevelt, 21,300.

The returns from the recent Vermont election show in round figures that the joint Republican and third party vote was 8 per cent short of the Republican vote four years ago, while the Democratic vote in that state shows a gain of 25 per cent over that of 1908. It is of special interest to speculate what will happen next November throughout the nation if the Republican and Democratic vote for the national tickets happens to be affected as the gubernatorial vote this month in Vermont has been affected. The New York Post has done some interesting figuring along this line, and as a net result it is shown that under the contingencies mentioned President Taft would carry only two states in November, Rhode Island and Vermont, all the others going for Governor Wilson. The conclusions reached by the Post follow:

To compute this result we should have to deduct 8 per cent from the vote cast for Taft four years ago and apportion the remaining vote in the ratio of 62 to 38 between Taft and Roosevelt, and we should have to add 35 per cent to Bryan's vote in 1908 and give the "demolition total" to Woodrow Wilson—in other words, give Taft 57 per cent and Roosevelt 35 per cent of Taft's vote four years ago and give Wilson 125 per cent of Bryan's vote four years ago.

The result in round numbers would be as follows, so far as regards Taft and Wilson:

	Taft	Wilson
Alabama	14,000	93,000
Arkansas	32,000	109,000
California	122,000	160,000

Indiana	159,000	423,000

Maryland	66,000	146,000
Massachusetts	153,000	194,000
Michigan	192,000	219,000
Minnesota	112,000	136,000
Mississippi	3,000	75,000
Missouri	199,000	448,000
Montana	18,000	33,000
Nebraska	73,000	164,000
Nevada	6,000	14,000
New Hampshire	30,000	42,000
New Jersey	151,000	208,000
New York	497,000	884,000
North Carolina	66,000	171,000
North Dakota	33,000	41,000
Ohio	327,000	528,000
Oklahoma	63,000	153,000
Oregon	39,000	48,000
Pennsylvania	425,000	561,000
Rhode Island	35,000	31,000
South Carolina	8,000	78,000
South Dakota	33,000	69,000
Tennessee	68,000	170,000
Texas	37,000	271,000
Utah	35,000	53,000
Vermont	23,000	14,000
Virginia	39,000	105,000
Washington	61,000	78,000
West Virginia	78,000	138,000
Wisconsin	142,000	208,000
Wyoming	12,000	18,000

A western third termer regrets that Roosevelt will not have time before election day to say half he means. He'll have plenty of time following it.

There is plenty of peace about the Taft candidacy, but nobody claims "it passeth understanding."

A "Wild Man" Found

Shrinking from all who approached him and seemingly ignorant of the use of modern utensils, Arthur Britton, 40 years old, a "wild man" found living in a cave in the Hawling Mountains, N. Y., was confined last week in the Hudson State Hospital that experts might study him in an effort to understand his remarkable case.

The man, who disappeared 10 years ago, was discovered living unclothed and uncivilized in the cave. He barked like a fox when approached, and the officers had difficulty in capturing him. His beard and hair were very long and soft brown hair covered his entire body. His teeth were strong, sharp like those of a carnivorous beast and his shaggy brows gave him a ferocious look. Snarling and yelping, he tried to evade capture and when placed in the hospital dashed about like a frightened wild thing. For that reason he was placed in a padded cell. Britton cannot talk, and the doctors said that was because of his long solitude.

Kills Three, Then Himself

John Caskey, 60 years, old, who has been living as a recluse for some years near New Market, Baltimore county, Thursday killed Frank Hendrix, 45 years old, his two sisters, Emma and Hester Hendrix, each more than 50 years of age, and then turned the revolver upon himself, sending a bullet through his head. He died shortly afterward.

Frank Hendrix was shot while he was at work at a churn in the barn, his sisters were killed while they sat quietly sewing at their home. When found the women each had a thimble on her finger.

Caskey's body was found at noon on the rear porch of his brother at New Market. While a jury of inquest was investigating the death, word came to them that the dead bodies of the Hendrix family had been discovered.

Dr. Giddings Predicts Race War

A war between whites and blacks as soon as the negro rises to a plane where he can back up his claim for equality was the prediction last Thursday of Prof. Franklin H. Giddings, sociologist of Columbia University, New York.

Dr. Giddings, in speaking of the fiftieth anniversary of the emancipation of the blacks, declared the enfranchisement of the race was a blunder and that political rights had been a hindrance rather than a help. As soon as the negro progresses to the point where he will be a real rival of the white man the country will have a problem to face greater and harder to handle than that which caused the Civil War, he said.

—The palmist thoroughly believes that most people should be taken in hand.

—It is generally sheer laziness that prompts a man to rest on his laurels.

—Those who neglect to make hay while the sun shines generally make trouble when it rains.

—A poor excuse is better than none, and many an old maid regards a husband as a poor excuse.

Banks on Honor Roll

J. Dukes Downes, State Banking Commissioner, last week completed the preparations of the roll of honor of Maryland banks. On the list are banks organized and operating under Maryland laws. It is the first roll of honor of Maryland banks that has been prepared. It numbers 80 institutions and includes state banks and trust companies. The statistics are based on figures at the close of business on September 4th.

To secure a place on the roll of honor, a banking institution must show surplus and undivided profits in excess of its capital stock; that is, assuming the capital to be 100 per cent, the surplus and profits must exceed that percentage. In other words, to be entitled to a place on the list an institution must have in form of surplus and profits combined an amount larger than its capital.

There are now in operation 116 state banks and trust companies in Maryland. Of these 30, or 26 per cent, are entitled to places on the roll. On the list the Bank of Somerset, at Princess Anne, is the 16th in the rank; the Bank of Crisfield the 19th, and the Farmers' Bank of Somerset County, at Marion Station, the 30th, the last in the rank.

The Next M. E. Conference

That the Wilmington M. E. Conference is desirous of holding the next session in Georgetown during March is evidenced by the fact that Rev. James W. Colona, pastor of Wesley M. E. Church of Georgetown has received a letter from Rev. V. S. Collins, of Middletown, a former pastor of the church, asking if it will be convenient for the next session to meet there. The matter has been referred to the official board of the local church, and they will call a meeting of members to decide whether or not the conference can be entertained in that town.

Capt. W. C. Coulbourne a Suicide

Capt. W. C. Coulbourne, aged about 60 years, committed suicide Monday evening of last week at the Carter's Creek fertilizer works at Irvington, Virginia, by shooting himself through the head. He was a Marylander, going to that place from Crisfield 14 years ago. He was widely known among the watermen of the Chesapeake and its tributaries. His health is supposed to have caused his act. The deceased is survived by a widow and two children, also two brothers and one sister, all of Somerset county.

Eastern Shore Promoters Ask for Power to Issue $2,000,000 in Securities

Hearing was held before the Public Service Commission on Monday of last week upon the application of the Eastern Shore Light, Power and Railway Company for permission to issue $1,000,000 in stock and a like amount in general mortgage bonds.

This company was chartered by the last Legislature to operate an electric railway in Somerset and Worcester counties and to engage in the lighting business.

Former Congressman Joshua W. Miles, of Princess Anne, and John Warner Staton, of Snow Hill, appeared as counsel for the company. Senator Lewis M. Milbourn, of Somerset county, who is president of the company, was on hand with a large delegation of residents of the two counties who are in favor of the enterprise. No opposition was offered to the application.

Killed in Pistol Duel

A colored settlement known as Wardtown, in Accomac county, Va., about 10 miles below Pocomoke City, got excited Sunday afternoon the 6th inst., when Robert Henry Holland, colored, was fatally injured by a gunshot wound inflicted by Peter Aydelotte, also colored. The shooting occurred just outside the village and inside the Maryland line, thus bringing the case within the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court for Worcester county.

Aydelotte came of his own accord to Pocomoke City and looked up Deputy Sheriff Dale. Holland was placed in an automobile and was taken to the office of Dr. F. W. Wilson, but died a few minutes after his arrival.

A colored camp is in full swing at Wardtown, where a large crowd of colored people had congregated. Holland and Aydelotte had not been friends for a long time, and when they met, Holland, it is said, opened fire on Aydelotte, and was in the act of firing again when Aydelotte pulled his gun and shot, the lead entering Holland's stomach. Aydelotte was placed in the lockup Sunday night.

A coroner's jury, Monday morning rendered a verdict of justifiable homicide. Justice of the Peace Hillman decided, however, that the matter should be presented to the grand jury, and held Aydelotte for the action of that body. The Circuit Court for Worcester county convened yesterday (Monday) when the grand jury began its duties. Sentiment seems to be in favor of Aydelotte, as it seems his life was in jeopardy.

Re-opening of Asbury Church

On the re-opening Sunday there will be a Sunday School Rally at 9.45 a.m. There will also be a reunion of pastors who have served in the present church structure. Rev. C. A. Hill, D. D., will preach at 11 a. m. The Epworth League will convene at 6.45. Rev. C. W. Prettyman, D. D., will preach at 7.30 p. m. Rev. G. P. Jones, District Superintendent, will also be present and assist in the service.

Thomas J. Ryan a Suicide

Thomas J. Ryan, for many years leader of the Democratic party in Philadelphia and a prominent promoter of amusement enterprises, ended his life in that city on Sunday, the 6th instant, by shooting himself through the mouth. The body was discovered in his office in a downtown office building shortly after he had been discussing business affairs with his private secretary.

Hundreds of letters, many unopened, were found on Mr. Ryan's desk. Among the opened mail was a receipt for $300 for premiums on insurance policies on his life.

Thomas J. Ryan was born in Philadelphia in 1857. He was elected to the Common Council in 1881. Since that time he has been prominently identified with the affairs of the Democratic party of the city and State. For years the Sixth ward under his leadership enjoyed the distinction of being the only Democratic ward in this city.

Big Whale Attacks Ship

How a gigantic sperm whale broke two steel ribs of the steam whaler Tyee, Jr., and disabled a dynamo and one engine when harpooned off Sitka Bay, Alaska, August 15, was told by the crew of the whaler, which arrived at Seattle, Wash., last week, from Baranof Island. The battle with the whale began when Gunner Sigurd Brak, former lieutenant in the Norwegian Navy, harpooned the big fellow. The whale dashed at the vessel with terrific speed. There was a crash as he struck amidships on the port side. The force of the collision increased the whale's fury, and after a hard struggle it escaped.

As soon as the blow was struck Capt. S. B. Shaw went below and examined the hull. He found that two steel ribs had been broken and the machinery put out of commission by the shock. The whale was nearly 90 feet long and worth $1,200. During the six months' cruise of the Tyee, Jr., 61 whales were captured.

Dorchester on Trial Trip

Another fine ship was added to Baltimore's fleet of passenger steamers Thursday, when the new side-wheeler Dorchester, which the Maryland Steel Company has just finished for the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company, went down the bay on her official trial trip. On board were Vice-President and General Manager Willard Thomson, of the railway company; Mr. A. H. Seth, assistant to the general manager, and T. Murdoch, general passenger agent.

The Dorchester is the finest ship in the railway company's fleet. She is of steel construction, 200 feet in length over all and has accommodations for 400 passengers. The Dorchester and Talbot, her sister ship, will be used on the Choptank river route to displace the old Joppa and Avalon; running to Easton, Oxford, Denton and Cambridge and other towns of less importance.

George R. Heffner Dead

Stricken with paralysis Thursday afternoon when apparently in the best of health, George R. Heffner, 65 years old, City Comptroller from 1903 to 1907 and one of the oldest shipbrokers in Baltimore, died at 8 o'clock Thursday night at his home, 538 North Broadway, Baltimore.

The stroke came without the slightest warning. Going to his office in the Marine Bank Building at the usual hour in the morning, Mr. Heffner attended to the business of his firm, talked with a number of sea captains, ate a hearty lunch and went to the Marine Bank, in which he is a director, shortly after 1 P. M. He became ill just after he left the bank and while walking toward the elevator. He called for Samuel Duerr, superintendent of the building, who assisted him to his private office. There he was met by his only son, George R. B. Heffner, and P. Willis Harding, who has been connected with the office for a number of years. Mr. Heffner was placed on a sofa, where he awaited the arrival of Dr. James C. Clare, who was summoned immediately. Later he was sent to his home in a private ambulance. Mr. Heffner, previous to becoming Comptroller, had served on the Harbor Board. He liked public office so well, particularly the Comptrollership, that he became a candidate to succeed himself in the spring of 1907, but was defeated by Mr. Harry F. Hooper.

Beaten in Woods by Negroes

Louis Satchell, 58 years old, was brutally assaulted and robbed by two negroes while on his way from Pungoteague, Va., to Keller Station to catch a train about 10 o'clock Monday morning of last week.

He was walking along a lonely stretch of wood when he was pounced upon by his assailants, who had been hiding in the bushes. He was beaten about the head and body with a heavy weapon and rendered unconscious. The negroes then ripped his pockets, taking a wallet containing $40 and made their escape.

The authorities of Keller were notified of the assault and two suspects were placed under arrest. Satchell is employed by the Menhaden Oil and Guano Company, of Harborton, Va. He formerly resided in Baltimore.

Governor Attends Anniversary

Governor Goldsborough and staff left Baltimore last Saturday for Philadelphia, where they took part in the celebration of the one hundred and twenty-third anniversary of the framing of the Constitution of the United States. The main celebration was at Independence Hall, and this was followed by a pageant. The Governor and staff were guests at a luncheon at the Union League Club. They returned to Baltimore Sunday night. Adjutant General Macklin headed the military division of the Governor's staff.

—The Salisbury District Epworth League Convention will be held at Selbyville, Nov. 13th and 14th.

WESLEY MILES TO HANG BIG YEAR FOR CEREALS

Girl's Assailant, Sentenced to Die, Will Be Brought Back to Somerset County

Wesley Miles, the negro charged with felonious assault on the 14-year-old daughter of former Sheriff Wm. J. Phillips, of Princess Anne, and taken to the Baltimore jail to prevent lynching, was convicted of the crime Thursday in Criminal Court No. 2 in that city. After deliberating 25 minutes the jury rendered the verdict at 6.15 P. M., finding Miles guilty on the first count of the indictment.

Miles was employed to work about the store of Mr. Phillips. May 28th last the girl was sent by her mother to the third story of their home, near the store, to pack some winter clothing. It is alleged that the negro followed her and kept her a prisoner in the attic for about half an hour. By threatening to kill her and her mother if she told what he had done and brandishing a knife at the same time, it was alleged, the negro terrorized the girl so that she did not say anything about the assault until she told her mother the following Sunday night.

When the girl's story became public the negro was taken to Baltimore by round-about ways to escape lynching parties. His case was subsequently removed to Baltimore and C. O. Melvin, of Pocomoke, was assigned by the Somerset County Court as counsel for the defense. State's Attorney Gordon Tull, of Somerset county, and Assistant State's Attorney Harry W. Nice prosecuted the case.

Miles was brought into the courtroom at ten o'clock Friday morning and Judge Gorter sentenced him to death. In a few words Judge Gorter spoke of the unpleasant duty he had to perform and then said:

"You have had a fair trial with all the safeguards that the law in its mercy thrown around those charged with a crime. You have been found guilty by a jury that was free from every possible influence that might naturally affect those who were acquainted with or in neighborly sympathy with the people that you have so deeply wronged."

"There is only left for me to sentence you for the crime that you have committed. All people and races have endeavored to protect their women from violence, because they knew that upon the inviolability of women depended the preservation of the race. In order to protect them from those who would outrage this great principle, the law has placed the highest penalty. You have placed yourself, by your act, in a position in which it becomes my duty—a duty which I had hoped I would never be called upon to perform—of imposing upon you the heaviest penalty of the law."

"I sentence you to be taken from here to the Baltimore City Jail, whence you came, there to be held subject to the order of the Sheriff of Somerset county, and then, at some time to be fixed by the Governor of the State, to be hanged by the neck until you are dead. And may God have mercy on your soul."

State's Attorney Tull expressed himself as being pleased with the result of the case. He said that the punishment was merited and that the negro had been accorded a fair and impartial trial. Sheriff Harding P. Tull was in court when the sentence was imposed, and he will have the arrangements to make for the hanging, after the day is set by Governor Goldsborough.

Roosevelt to Speak in Baltimore

Former United States Senator George L. Wellington will introduce Colonel Roosevelt when the latter speaks at the Lyric, Baltimore, on October 17th. This was decided Thursday and Colonel Carrington received a telegram from Senator Wellington saying that he would be on hand. Dr. A. R. L. Dohme will probably present Senator Wellington. Gen. N. Winslow Williams, chairman of the Progressive League, has conferred with Colonel Carrington; Colonel Baldwin, treasurer of the committee, and Chas. R. Schirm, chairman of the campaign committee, and it was agreed to have noonday meetings, beginning this week. Arrangements have been made for Mr. Schirm and Colonel Baldwin to make a stumping tour on the Eastern Shore this week.

Dover Property Sold

The old historic Cowgill or Hillyard Mansion in Dover, Del., known as the "Haunted House," situated on King street, has been purchased by former Judge Daniel O. Hastings, of Wilmington, for $12,000. The property was purchased from Mrs. Sallie C. Holmes, who has owned and lived in the mansion for several years. In addition to the brick mansion there are eight acres of land attached to the property. Judge Hastings is a native of Somerset county and is a son of Mr. Daniel Hastings, now residing in Salisbury. The old Hastings home is located about six miles north of Princess Anne.

Department's Report for October Shows Bumper Crops—The Farmer is Prosperous

Never before have the great cereal crops of the United States been so bountiful as those of this year. Records of production for almost every cereal have been surpassed, in some instances by millions of bushels.

The October crop report of the Department of Agriculture shows spring wheat, oats, barley, rye and hay all have exceeded the best record productions, while the crops of corn and potatoes from present indications also will be the greatest ever when harvested.

Speaking of this great showing made by the country's farmers, James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, last week said:

"The crops are the heaviest on record. The season has been favorable, but some credit is due to the wide efforts made in late years by the federal government and the states to help farmers throughout the country to get better returns from the average acre."

"Twenty-eight million pieces of literature have been sent out by the Department in addition to the advices from the state stations along these lines. So the farmers have been helped in producing their record-breaking crops."

The features of the report are the enormous harvests of corn, oats and spring wheat. More than 3,000,000,000 bushels of corn, almost 1,500,000,000 bushels of oats and 330,000,000 bushels of spring wheat have been grown. The states in the Northwest are harvesting the greatest crops ever grown there.

In North Dakota 146,592,000 bushels of spring wheat, the greatest spring-wheat harvest ever grown by any state, was produced. The yield per acre there was increased from eight bushels last year to 18 bushels this year.

Iowa, with 219,780,000 bushels; Illinois, with 182,726,000 bushels; Minnesota, with 122,982,000 bushels, and North Dakota, with 96,138,000 bushels, were the principal oat producers. In each of these states the yield per acre this year was almost double last year's yield.

"It looks as if we won't have to import any potatoes this year," said Secretary Wilson in commenting on the record potato crop. Indications are that the farmers will have 108,000,000 bushels more potatoes this year than last, when by reason of the short crop, large quantities were imported from Europe.

Millie and Christine Dead

Millie, one of the celebrated negro Millie-Christine twins, died last Wednesday at the home of the pair near Wilmington, in Columbus county, N. C., while Christine lived on for some hours, but her expected death came Wednesday afternoon.

The twins had two heads and two sets of legs, but had the same body. They had been exhibited all over this country and in Europe and could speak several languages fluently. They could carry on a conversation with each other or could talk to others at the same time.

The twins could eat independently of each other, but both could eat at the same time, and this they did most of the time. While one was asleep the other could be awake, but as a rule they went to sleep at the same time. They were joined together in the back for a distance of about 26 inches.

Born in slavery times, these colored women were sold for $40,000, to be used for exhibition purposes. They were stolen from the owner in Philadelphia and a few years later were found in London, where they were being exhibited. The owner recovered them and they had been on exhibition throughout this and other countries ever since and were reputed to be wealthy.

Emancipation Celebration

A committee of colored citizens of Salisbury, have arranged to hold a big emancipation celebration at the Wilcomico Fair grounds, Salisbury, Tuesday, October 15th. Arrangements have been made for half a dozen brass bands, a parade of floats telling the advancement of the colored race, a grand turnout of the secret bodies composed of colored men and women, and an all-day celebration at the fair grounds.

Hon. Walter B. Miller will welcome the visitors to Salisbury and Rev. R. G. Waters will respond. The principal address of the day will be made by Judge Robert E. Torrel, of the Municipal Court of the District of Columbia. In the afternoon there will be horse racing, bicycle and motorcycle racing, and at night there will be a large dance.

On the Sands.
A man, bearing in his arms the motionless form of a woman, paused later that night in the shadow of a low stone hovel, near the lower gate of the Mount. As he crouched beneath the thatch projecting like the rim of an old hat above him his eyes, eager, fierce, studied the distance he had yet to traverse from the end of the narrow alley, where he had stopped, to the open entrance at the base of the rock to the sands. The goal was not far; but a few moments would have sufficed to reach it; only between him and the point he had so long been striving to attain, an obstacle, or group of obstacles, intervened. Before a bonfire of wreckage of stuff—furniture and household goods—several ragged, dissolute fellows sat with bottles before them, drinking hard and quarreling the while over a number of glittering gems, gold snuffboxes and trinkets of all kinds.

"This bit of ivory for the white stone!"
"Add the brooch!"
"Not it! Look at the picture! Her ladyship, perhaps!"

"For all not found her?"
"No; for the searching! But she is somewhere; can't have escaped from the Mount. And when the drabs and trulls lay hands on her!"

"Ay, when!" casting the dice.
The man, peering from the alley, hesitated no longer; behind sounded the footsteps of others, and gathering his burden more firmly, he strode boldly forth toward the group and the gate. At his approach, their talk—a jargon of "filthy Latin" that smacked more of the cabarets of Paris than those of the coast—momentarily ceased; beneath lowering brows, they stared hard.

"What have you there, comrade?" said one.

"Look and see!" answered the man in a rough tone.

"Poor booty! A woman!" quoted another with a harsh laugh. "You're easily pleased. As if wenches were not plentiful enough on other occasions, without wasting time on a night like this, when diamonds and gold are to be had for the searching!"

"And silver plates and watches and rare liquors!" cried a third in knaves' argot. "Every one, however, to his taste; An you prefer a light-of-love to light such as these have," juggling with the gems, "you but stamp yourself a fool."

"You're welcome to your opinion, my friend!" The man with the burden spoke bruski. "Good night!"
"Stay, why such haste? You seem not a bad fellow. Set the wench down. We'll have sight of her, and, perhaps, with coarse expletives, "if she's a pretty face, and a taste for this fiery liquor the old monks laid down, we'll find a gewgaw or two to her liking!"

But the man made no answer; was about to pass on, when the speaker noticed for the first time the woman's hand, white and small, hanging limply. "What's this? More jewels?" His exclamation was caught up by the others. "Not so fast, comrade! This puts a different face to the matter. Set down the booty, and, springing to his feet, "we'll see what it's worth."

"I'll not stop!" The man looked at him steadily. "On the Mount is, or should be, plenty for all! Go seek for yourself!"

"Pardi!" softly. "Here's one dares speak his mind!"
"I speak plainly," in a tone of authority, "and you would do well to heed!"

"Perhaps," interposing. "What say you, comrades?"

Evil smiles illumined evil faces; they, who had just been on the point of blows among themselves, now regarded one another with common understanding. One weighed tentatively that delicate weapon, a spontoon; a second stroked his halberd, as liking to feel the smoothness of the shaft, while a third reached for a gleaming "Foldard's Partizan." And in the glare of the fire every implement showed sign it had been used that night. The point of the spontoon was as steel crusted o'er; the ax of the halberd might have come from a boucherie; the blade of the "Partizan" resembled a great leaf at autumn-time. This last waved perilously near the unconscious burden; had the man made a movement to resist, would have struck; but the black eyes, only, combated—held the blood-stained ones. Though not for long; again the weapon seemed about to dart forth; the man about to hurl himself and his burden desperately aside, when, from above, came the sound of hoarse laughter and singing, and simultaneously a number of peasants, Bretons by their dress, burst into view.

"Eh, cockatoo, what now!"
Many of these new-comers were hurt; few free from cuts; but none thought of stanching their wounds. Their principal concern seemed for articles they carried—heavy, light; valuable, paltry—spoils from the high! Two staggered beneath a great chest stamped with the arms of the Mount and its motto, and appeared anxious to hurry—perchance toward the forest on the shore where they might bury their treasure. Others had in their arms imposing pieces of silver; vases and a massive surcoat of table that had once belonged to the Cardinal Dubois. A woman, gaunt, toothless, wore a voluminous bonnet a l'Argus, left at the Mount by one of the ladies of the court; and waved before her a fan, set with jewels. She it was who called out:

"Eh, cockatoo!" shrilly. "Who would you be killing?"

"A selfish fellow that refuses to share!" answered he of the halberd, as if little pleased at the interruption.

"Refuses to share, does he?" she repeated, and, swaggering down, peered forward; only to start back.

"The Black Seigneur!"

"The Black Seigneur!"

Those who accompanied her—a rough rabble from field and forest—gazed, not without surprise, or uncouth admiration, at one whose name and fame were well known on that northern coast; but these evidences of rough approval were not shared by the alien rogues. On my lady's finger the gem sparkled; held their eyes like a lure. Black Seigneur, or not, they muttered sullenly, what knew they of her he had with him; whose hand was not that of cinder-wench or scullery maid? Let them look at her face! She might be a great lady—she might be the Governor's daughter herself!

"The Governor's daughter!" All, alike, caught at the word.

"And if she were!" fiercely the Black Seigneur confronted them.

While, hesitating, they sought for a reply, quickly he went on. Who had a better right to her? The Black Seigneur! The Lady Elise! Harshly he laughed. Was it not fair spoil? His Excellency's enemy; his Excellency's daughter. Did they think treasure sweeter than revenge? Let them try to rob him of it! As for the ring? Contemptuously he took it from my lady's hand; threw it among them.

A few scrambled, others were still for finishing the tragedy then. The people versus the lords and their spawn. "Kill at once!" the injunction had gone forth from Paris.

As he spoke, one of the fiercest put out his hand; touched my lady, when the fingers of the Black Seigneur gripped hard his throat; buried him so violently back, he lay still. Companions sprang to his aid; certain of the peasants interferred.

"Let him alone!"

"He speaks fair!"

"Bah! Tonight all are equal."

"Your Black Seigneur is no better than others!"

"You lie!" In a high tone the woman with the great lady's hat broke in.

"At them, my chickens! Beat well these Paris rogues, who come only for the picking!"

"Yes; beat them well!"

But the runagates of the great city were not of a kind to submit lightly; curses and blows were exchanged; knives gleamed and swords flashed. Amid a scene of confusion, the cause of it stayed not to witness the outcome; running down the sloping way, soon found himself on the sands; then keeping to the shadows, passed around the corner of the wall.

Here, for the time concealed was he safe; none followed, and, leaning against the damp blocks of masonry, breathing hard, as a man weak from fatigue, loss of blood, he sought to recover his strength. It returned only too slowly; the passing lassitude annoyed him; for the moment he forgot he had but recently come from the dungeon and the hardships that sap elasticity and vigor. He was impatient to move on; looked at my lady—and a sudden fear smote him! How white she appeared! Had she—His hand trembled at her heart; a blank dismay overcame him; then joy—At that instant he thought not of the gulf between them; was conscious only he held her—slender, beautiful—in his arms; that she seemed all his own, with her breath on his cheek, her soft lips so close. Above sounded the madness of the night; the crackling of flames; the intemperate voices! In the angle of the will, with darkness a blanket around them, he pushed back the hair from her clear brow, bent over, closer—suddenly straightened.

"Pardi!" he muttered, a flush on his face. "Am I, then, like the others, pillagers, thieves?"

Several moments he yet stood, breathing deep; then, starting away, set himself to the task of crossing the vast stretch of beach between the Mount and the distant lights of a ship.

The sandy plain had never seemed so interminable; before him, his shadow and that of my lady danced ever illusively away; behind, the great rock gave forth a hundred shooting flames, while, as emblematic of the demolition of so much that was beautiful, higher than saint with helpless sword on cathedral top, a cloud of smoke belched up; waved sidewise like a monstrous funeral plume. A symbol, it seemed to fill the sky; to move and nod and flaunt its ominous blackness from this majestic outpost of the land. Walking in a vivid crimson glow, the Black Seigneur gazed only ahead, where now, on that monotonous desert, the rim of the sea on a sudden outraged. As he advanced, sparkles red as rubies—laughing lights—leaped in the air; at the same time a seething murmur broke upon the stillness.

Toward those leaping bright points and the source of that deep-sounding cadence, the young man stumbled forward more rapidly, less cautiously, also, it may be; for while he was yet some distance from the water's rim, his feet fell on sand that gave way beneath them. He would have sprung back, but felt himself sinking; strove to get out, only to settle the deeper! The edge of the life, with safety beyond, well he could see, where the sat-like smoothness of the treacherous slough merged into a welcome silk-like shimmering of the trustworthiness of the sands. That verge, however, was remote; out of reach of effort of his to attain; his very endeavors caused him to become the more firmly imbedded. Had he cast my lady aside, possibly could he have extricated himself; but with her, an additional weight, weighing him down—

Loudly he called out; only the sea answered. Now were the clinging particles at his waist; he lifted my lady higher; clear of them! Once more raised his voice—this time not in vain!

"Mon capitaine! Where are you?"

"Here!"

"We don't see you."

"You won't soon, unless—"

The end of a line struck the sand.

The night had almost passed; its last black hour, like a pall, lay over the sea, where, far from the Mount, a ship swayed and tossed. In the narrow confines of her master's cabin, the faint glimmering of a lamp revealed a man bending over a paper, yellow and worn; the lines so faint and delicate, they seemed almost to escape him!

How strange, after all these years, the sight of your handwriting!—and now, to be writing you! Yet is it meet—to say farewell? For that which you have heard, mon ami, is true. I am going to die. You say, you heard I was not well; I answer what really you heard; the question, mon ami, beneath your words! . . . And, dying, it is well with me. I have wronged no soul on earth—except you, my friend, and you forgive me. . . . I had hoped the years would efface that old memory. You say they have not. . . . It is wise you are going away.

The reader paused; listened to the sea; the moaning and sighing, like voices on the wings of the storm.

You speak in your letter about "trickery"—used to estrange us! Think no more of it. I beg you. What is past, is gone—as I, part of that past, when we were boy and girl together—soon shall be. And come not near the Mount. There can be no meeting for us on earth. I send you my adieu from afar. . . . It is only a shadow that speaks. . . . mon ami.

LEAP YEAR NONSENSE.

It was scarcely to be assumed that the old-time fancy about leap year affording a special opportunity to unmarried women to take the initiative in matrimonial affairs would be taken seriously by anyone in this twentieth century and in this present year 1912. But it appears that at least one New York newspaper man thought it worth while to interview some woman on the subject, and he selected Miss Sylvia Pankhurst. He got his interview all right, and Miss Pankhurst's remarks will find a very general response among the independent, self-contained and self-respecting young women of America, says the Manhattan Union. "Is leap year of any use to me?" she repeated, and answered indignantly: "Of course not! The idea of proposing to a man never entered my head. I have other and more important things to think of. You ask me a silly and personal question. The only people who think anything of leap year and the chance of girls taking the initiative and making proposals of marriage are men. Women don't think of such things for a minute." That settles it, and if there is any proposing to be done the men will have to do it, leap year or no leap year.

Professor Loudon told his audiences at the Psychological society meeting that dieting and fasting will not cure digestive troubles, but that exercise, plain food and a good frame of mind will. It is noticed that there is not a pill or powder in the professor's prescription. The basis idea of his remedy is embraced in the three words—faith, work, simplicity. They go together like the three dimensions. Now, it will be noticed that the professor's prescription is not good for the stomach and the liver only, but for all the bodily functions—for the brain, the nerve, the kidneys, the lungs, the bones, etc. It is nature's gentle voice to the wayward appetite and the lazy desire—live right, live on sunshine, outside and inside; on the street and in the heart. The sunshine made the world, and all that is in it, the heavens and all the stars, and in the heaven so come the atmosphere will be sunshine, and in this world it will make the good "frame of mind" that the professor speaks of.

The oldest investment security on earth is the real estate mortgage, says Leslie's Magazine. We know that money was loaned on mortgages in ancient Babylon, in the time of King Hammurabi, four thousand years ago, and that some twenty-five hundred years ago the great Babylonian banking house of the Egibi family invested large sums in mortgages on both city and farm property, the mortgages being recorded on bricks, which have been preserved in the safety deposit vaults of those times—great earthenware jars buried in the earth—preserved until the archaeologists, in our own day and age, dug them up to show us when, where and how mortgages originated.

As was to be expected, the attempt to "house-break" the male of the Chicago species has failed. The board of education of that city has decided that the boys in the schools need no longer take lessons in sewing, darning and fancy work.

It is announced that the fare between New York and Chicago may be reduced. What a lot of Chicago people would like just now is a material reduction of the fare between Chicago and the equator.

INDIA'S SACRED MONKEYS.

An Intruder Into Their Jungle Retreat

Got a Good Scare.

In various parts of India monkeys are regarded as objects of worship. One of the principal monkey temples is at Nuddea. Such veneration is shown there to Huniman, the monkey god, that visitors may not enter the court of the temple without removing their shoes.

On one occasion an English officer, in passing up the country near Nuddea, chanced to stroll into a bamboo jungle when his boat had "put to" for the night. He had not advanced far before he heard a terrific uproar all about him, and he was not a little alarmed to behold a whole army of the largest monkeys he had ever seen making toward him from all quarters.

Some jumped on the ground before him, others swung by the bamboos over his head, and many closed up the path in his rear. Several females had young ones clinging to them, but this fact did not seem to render them less agile than the others.

The Englishman knew not what to do. He yelled at the top of his voice for assistance. To his intense relief, each time that he yelled the monkeys retreated a bit. This encouraged him to persevere in his shouting, but he observed that when he himself began to retreat the monkeys would again begin to close in upon him.

Then he stood still and gave one tremendous shout, whereat the monkeys went back again. This time the man had gained fully twenty yards and was about to repeat the call when there appeared a new figure upon the scene in the person of an aged, decrepit woman hobbling through the midst of the animals.

This aged person shook two or three of the monkeys by the paws as she passed. No sooner had she come within hearing of the Britisher than she opened upon him the vials of her wrath for disturbing the sacred animals in their retirement. She bade the intruder depart, and that quickly, an order which he lost no time in executing. The monkeys all seemed implicitly to obey the old woman's bidding, making way for the man's retreat.

The old woman, it appeared, was employed by the Brahmans to supply the monkeys with their food each day. They were worshipped by all the people in the country round, who brought offerings of rice and sweets to them continually.—Harper's Weekly.

Dancing Stars.

The spectroscopic makes the starry heavens to the astronomer's eye appear almost as full of mazy motions as is a cloud of gnats dancing in the sunshine. Every increase in the power of the observing apparatus brings to notice new spectroscopic phenomena, which are simply double stars that cannot be seen separately either because of their extreme closeness or because only one of them is a shining body. It is the erratic motions of these stars that reveal their true character. One of them discovered within recent years is Eta Orionis, which hangs just below the belt of Orion. Sometimes this star is speeding toward the earth more than forty miles a second and a few nights later is hurrying away with a similar velocity.—New York Sun.

A Paradox.

A maiden well advanced in years used to wait every morning for the postman, a bachelor of about her age, and ask him if there was not a letter for her. Several weeks passed thus, but the anxiously expected letter did not arrive. Finally one morning the postman said to her, "Well, tomorrow you shall get your letter, if I have to write it myself." "That's right; do it," replied the old maid. "I shall be delighted to accept it." "Well," said the postman, smiling, "what do you want me to write—a business letter or a love letter?" "If you mean business please write a love letter," was her blushing reply.—London Answers.

Catching Redhot Rivets.

This would not seem to be a pleasing occupation even if the rivet is caught in an old mail bag, yet the feat is constantly performed by workmen. Ordinarily they catch rivets in a rivet keg or something of that sort, but there are men who catch rivets with a pair of tongs—just reach out for them and nip a redhot rivet out of the air with the nipper part of the tongs in much the same way that a bird nips a flying feather out of the air with its beak. The feat is commonly seen by persons who watch workmen on high buildings.—Harper's Weekly.

Bending Wood.

Wood may be made soft and flexible by steeping it in a concentrated solution of common table salt to which some acetate of iron has been added. A better method is to immerse the wood in a bath made by dissolving twenty-five parts of calcium chloride in a hundred parts of water. It should be left there for some time and after bending thrown in cold water to harden.

He Would Divide.

"Yes," said the eminent specialist to the tramp who had called upon him. "I will examine you carefully for ten dollars."

"All right, doc," said the tramp resignedly. "do dat, an' if you find it I'll give you half."

Say not always what thou knowest, but always know what thou sayest.—Claudian.

Civic Club And Its Enterprises

The Civic Club, composed of prominent ladies of Princess Anne, has resumed its meetings for the winter. The public will be glad to hear this as the work of this organization has been of a most commendable character. Co-operating with the town commissioners, the Club has instituted some excellent reforms, especially in the matter of a cleaner and more sanitary town.

The Club now has in view a piece of work of a costly character, namely the erection of a concrete bridge over the Manokin at the head of Main street, and asks the co-operation of the people of the town. Such a structure would be not only a useful but an ornamental acquisition. The members of the Club perhaps realize that the public finances of the town would justify no more than repairs to the present wooden structure or perhaps a new one of the same kind. They are not satisfied with such a policy but desire to erect a structure of a permanent character and one that is more sightly.

What the result of this effort will be remains to be seen. The call for assistance, however, should not go unheeded. Women have a way of making things go when they get started and we have no doubt that in due time their prospective enterprise will be realized. In any event the Club deserves all the help that the town commissioners and the people of the place can bestow, not only in this but also in its smaller enterprises.

The Plain Duty of the Hour

Reports from Democratic National Headquarters are very assuring of a Democratic triumph next month. The united condition of the Democracy and the divided condition of the opposition makes a most favorable outlook. The present situation leaves little to be wished for. If the full party vote can be polled defeat is thought to be impossible.

There is one thing, however, which might defeat the party and that is over-confidence. "Security is man's chief enemy—in politics." To avoid such a possibility, a thorough organization and a vigorous campaign are absolutely necessary. The plain duty of every Democrat, therefore, is to help in organizing and to co-operate in the campaigning. Battles are never won, however, propitious the outlook, without careful planning and vigorous fighting. Each Democrat is urged to do his individual part in helping to elect Wilson, Marshall and Covington.

Still another matter should not be lost sight of and that is the funds with which to do the campaign work. In another column will be found an appeal from Blair Lee, treasurer of the Democratic Auxiliary Committee, for contributions of $5 and under to be forwarded directly to him. Heed should be given to this appeal. It takes money to run a political campaign and the present one is being run upon popular lines. The time is now very short and contributions should be sent in promptly.

The duty then of all Democrats who want to join in a Democratic jubilee in November is to do their individual share of the work necessary to bring about such a jubilee. Over-confidence, or the belief that the Democrats are going to win anyhow, might be a fatal policy. Let every one wake up to the situation and do his share in achieving the expected result.

The man who gets a soft berth generally has to root someone else out of it.

"Common People" Buncomb

The New York Evening Sun is entitled to the thanks of all citizens of good impulses and sound common sense for striking a blow from the shoulder at a popular, but senseless, political fad in the following trenchant paragraph: Politicians in general, and the Hon. William Sulzer in particular, should stop talking stuff and nonsense about the common people. There are no common people in this country as a distinction. We claim to be level headed, intelligent, hard working and self-respecting people, and the only "common" person is the thick-brained politician who thinks he is making himself popular by talking nonsense.

The "common people" gag has been employed to the limit of patience. It has formed a glib morsel for politicians and reformers to roll unctuously from their lips in the fond presumption that it establishes their sympathy with those who have to work for a living and gains for them the kind regard of those to whom it is applied. Never was there an expression which really meant less, although it is believed by those who make common use of it to be most effective. It is a political fraud and should be tabooed from this time henceforth and forever. —Wilmington Every Evening.

A Brilliant Bout

When Greek meets Greek then comes the tug of war. In the debate of Monday night oratorical brilliance shone from two of its best representatives and scintillated through the Lyric. The advocate of the Bull Moose, Hon. Bourke Cockran, and the eminent Maryland senator and advocate of Woodrow Wilson, Isidor Rayner, met in verbal combat.

Seldom in recent political campaigns has there been such an interesting and warmly-contested set of advocates of one or another candidates upon the field of debate. The conclusion reached by the audience as to the merits of the candidates, held in esteem by the respective debaters, was probably much the same as held by the individuals before hearing the sons of thunder.

The treat, however, was a real one, and Maryland held up its standard of the forensic ability of its sons, irrespective of the relative cogency of the arguments put forth by the two contestants. —Baltimore American.

The Nation's Debt to Mr. Bryan

Of the new political ideas which pass current in our time, more by far have been shaped by Mr. Bryan, or at least passed on by him from his Populist inheritance, than have come into being from any other single source. For, as everybody knows, Mr. Roosevelt's familiar image and superscription have been stamped on coin annually borrowed from his rival's mint. The publicity of campaign expenditures, the election of Senators by the people, the system of direct nominations, initiative, referendum and all the paraphernalia of direct government based upon complete confidence in the people—all these electric issues, from whatever source derived, were articles of Mr. Bryan's faith when Mr. Roosevelt's creed knew them not. It is a safe assertion that, in the making of the American nation today out of the materials of 20 years ago, Mr. Bryan has been the largest personal factor. And if this be true, then indeed he is a successful man. —Atlantic Monthly.

Mr. Dimon has removed to Cambridge and has assumed control of the Dorchester Standard.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

A DOZEN REASONS

Why I Should Vote for Next President—Wilson—Because:

1. He is the only candidate for President who represents the real, the vital and the effective progressive forces in this country.
2. He stands for tariff revision downward in the interest of lower prices and the elimination of monopoly.
3. He stands for trust legislation which will prevent the control of prices through any sort of monopoly.
4. He stands for the income tax and believes that wealth should share the burdens as well as the blessings of government.
5. He stands for the rights of labor and the protection of the man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow, as shown in his record as Governor of New Jersey.
6. He stands for the revival of our merchant marine, and for the government encouragement of agriculture, industrial and vocational education.
7. He trusts the people and believes that the governed should govern; and that Senators should be chosen by the people.
8. He faithfully performs in office the promises made out of office.
9. He will "CLEAN HOUSE" at Washington as he has "CLEANED HOUSE" in New Jersey.
10. He preaches and practices clean politics, and practices it effectively. He unalterably opposes machine politics and the rule of the bosses.
11. He stands for legitimate big business every day, but for monopoly never.
12. As Senator LaFollette says, "He approaches every problem with the solemn promises to be really, in the highest sense, a servant of the people."

For One Cent Letter Postage

Local business men are greatly interested in the campaign now being conducted for one cent letter postage. Active steps looking toward the inauguration of the lower postage rate will be taken by congress this winter according to the present outlook.

Now that the parcels post problem has been disposed of, the next important step in postal affairs in this country will be the inauguration of one cent letter postage, according to the officers of the National One Cent Letter Association, which is conducting a campaign for one cent postage.

Business men are backing the movement for the lower rate. The association already has a big membership in this state, and is constantly seeking to enlarge it, so that when the real battle for lower postage is waged in congress next winter, the association will receive ample backing from the business men, whom it will most benefit.

Many important postal reforms have been inaugurated during the past year, resulting in the elimination of a huge deficit and the accumulation of a creditable cash surplus. In addition to this a plan has been adopted for a limited parcels post, to be put into effect early next year. Advocates of one cent postage declare that in simple justice the government must establish the lower rate at once.

Under present conditions first-class mail is paying a surplus to the government of over $62,000,000 a year. Although it requires two cents to mail a letter anywhere in the United States, it is estimated that it actually costs the government about one cent to carry it. The post office department has always been operated with a view to carry mail at cost. At the present time the department receives on first-class mail a revenue of at least 84 cents per pound, equal to $1860 per ton, thus making a profit of 66 per cent. Although first-class mail supplies less than one-eighth of the total tonnage of the mails, yet it pays 65 per cent of the total revenue. This is the principal reason why the advocates of one cent postage claim the rate should be cut in two.

An unusually active campaign on behalf of the propaganda for one cent letter postage is being conducted by the National One Cent Letter Postage Association, which has its headquarters in Cleveland. Its officers are Charles Wm. Burrows, president, and George T. McIntosh, secretary and treasurer. Its advisory board is made up of some of the biggest merchants throughout the country.

Oliver J. Thomas vs. Addie M. Thomas.

No. 2769, Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity.

The object of this suit is to procure a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant.

The bill states that the parties were married in Pocomoke City, Maryland, on the 14th day of May, 1898; that through the conduct of the plaintiff towards the defendant has been kind and above reproach, the defendant has refused to live with the plaintiff and without any just cause or reason has deserted and abandoned the plaintiff; that such abandonment has continued uninterrupted for at least three years and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that the parties have no children born to them from said marriage, that the plaintiff is a resident of the State of Maryland, and has been such resident ever since said marriage; that the defendant is now a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and is supposed to reside in the District of Columbia.

It is thereupon this 12th day of October, 1912, ordered by the subscriber, Clerk of the Circuit Court for Somerset county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Somerset county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 11th day of November, 1912, to give notice to the said non-resident defendant, Addie M. —A matter of interest to every section of this State should be the care of orchards and improved cultivation of small fruits. Some parts on account of location, soil and climatic conditions are admirably adapted for successful results. To remove limbs which cross and are liable to cause injury to each other by rubbing. To remove limbs that are growing too close together and complete for the same space. To check the growth that is too vigorous to produce good fruit. To cut out bushy growth or twigs, or thin the tops. We suggest that every Village Improvement Association, also Farmers' Clubs throughout the State get together and buy a first class spraying outfit for use of the community and every fall and spring club together for the expense of labor and spraying material and have all fruit trees in the vicinity sprayed systematically. Some people can afford to pay for the spraying but have no apparatus or are too busy at the proper time; others have not the money, but if their trees on the other side of the fence are infested with scale, they are a menace to the trees of their neighbors who have sprayed. This should be made "Community Work" to be efficient.

What Constitutes a Subscriber
A Court decision has lately been rendered in Massachusetts on what constitutes a subscriber. The Judge firmly believed that the man who receives the paper, although he never subscribed for it, is entitled to pay, says the American Press.

James Thompson moved, and William Robinson took immediate possession, and received and accepted a weekly paper that was delivered to him through the mails every week. The good natured editor sent accounts frequently, but no attention was paid to them by Mr. Robinson.

Robinson had received the paper for some time, he informed the collector, but he said that he never subscribed and declined to pay for it. The Judge personally questioned the defendant, who said that he had read and made use of it and was receiving the accounts, which were frequently enclosed in the paper.

Judgment was rendered in favor of the newspaper. The judge was severe in his criticism of people who are receiving papers and do not think it worth while to pay for what they receive and make use of. It is an act of dishonesty, he said. One should acquaint the publisher and pay for whatever numbers he receives.

More Valuable Than Gold
In 1911, according to the United States Geological Survey, 2,390 ounces of palladium were produced, 300 ounces from crude foreign and domestic sands and the rest from the refining of copper ores and copper bullion.

Palladium finds a fairly large use in technology. Circle of astronomical instruments are made of it, and it is also employed in watchmaking. Its most extensive use is probably for certain alloys in dental work. It is also employed for soldering platinum metals. As it is not altered or discolored by exposure to air it is often used for plating mental ware. The demand for this metal is greater than the supply.

According to the Bureau of Statistics, 1,218 troy ounces of palladium were imported into the United States in 1911, the value assigned being $59,307, or $46.22 an ounce.

VARIEGATED SPELLING.

Mark Twain Liked It Because It Was So Refreshing.

Writing in the Hartford Courant on "Mark Twain," Dr. Edwin P. Parker of Hartford said:

"In 1876, according to my memorandum, a notable spelling match took place at the Asylum Hill Congregational church, in which some thirty persons, under their respective captains, took part. Among these contestants were Dr. Burton, Judge Carpenter, Charles E. Perkins, Mr. Clemens, Mr. Twichell, Charles H. Clark, General Hawley, Miss Trumbull, Miss Blythe, Miss Burbank and Miss Stone. At last there were left standing only Dr. Burton and Miss Stone, and the gallant doctor took the first opportunity to make an error and so to leave Miss Stone the winner.

"But this notable contest was preceded by a preliminary speech in which Mr. Clemens wittily criticized the supposed necessity of having any uniform and arbitrary way of spelling words. Among several amusing illustrations of his argument was one as follows: 'I have a correspondent whose letters are always a refreshment to me, there is such a breezy, unfettered originality about his orthography. He always spells Kow with a large K. Now, that is just as good as to spell it in the conventional way with a small one! It is better, for it suggests to the mind a new, grand and impressive creature.'

"Nevertheless, in the contest that ensued Mr. Clemens produced no 'superb effects of variegated spelling,' but stood up among the last five, if my record is right, only Mr. Clark, Miss Keep, Dr. Burton and Miss Stone outlasting him."

MOTION OF THE EARTH.

It May Easily Be Demonstrated by a Simple Method.

It is quite possible to prove that the earth revolves on its axis by a simple experiment and without having recourse to mathematics. Take a good sized bowl, fill it nearly full of water and place it upon the floor of a room which is not exposed to shaking or jarring from the street.

Sprinkle over the surface of the water a coating of lycopodium powder, a white substance which can be bought at almost any drug store. Then upon the surface of this coating of powder make with powdered charcoal a straight black line, say, an inch or two inches in length and lying north and south.

Having made this little black mark with the charcoal powder on the surface of the contents of the bowl, lay down upon the floor a stick or some other straight object, so that it shall be exactly parallel with the mark. Leave the bowl undisturbed for a few hours and then notice the position of the black mark with reference to the object that it was parallel with. It will be found to have shifted its direction and to have moved from east to west—that is to say, in a direction opposite to that of the movement of the earth on its axis.

The earth in its simply revolving has carried the water and everything else in the bowl around with it, but the powder on the surface has been left behind a little. The line will always be found to have moved from east to west, which is good proof that everything else has moved the other way.

No More Smiling.

The new vicar was paying a visit among the patients in the local hospital. When he entered ward No. 2 he came across a pale looking young man lying in a cot, heavily swathed in bandages. There he stopped, and after administering a few words of comfort to the unfortunate sufferer, he remarked in cheering tones:

"Never mind, my man, you'll soon be all right. Keep on smiling; that's the way of the world."

"I'll never smile again," replied the youth sadly.

"Rubbish!" ejaculated the vicar.

"There ain't no rubbish about it!" exclaimed the other heatedly. "It's through smiling at another fellow's girl that I'm here now."—Pearson's Weekly.

His Eloquence.

The curate of a country parish lately preached a charity sermon, and the collection which followed amounted to £20 7s. 4½d. In the vestry after the service the churchwardens counted it out and mentioned the result. "Well," said the reverend preacher, "I must have preached pretty well to get all that." "No doubt you did, sir," replied one of the churchwardens who had been collecting, "but the squire put in a £20 note, and he's dead!"—London Mail.

Unreluctantly.

"Ralph Darney called again last night, Bessie, didn't he? You know, he's rather well off, so I hope you didn't treat him distantly," said mamma.

"Indeed I didn't, mamma. I was very much drawn to him—very much," she answered, with a blush.

A Hardship.

"They talk of hardships," said an Irish soldier as he lay down to sleep on the deck of a transport, "but, be- hold, this is the hardest ship I was ever in to my life!"

Health and an Umbrella.

SONG OF THE WHALE.

The Humpback is a Little More Musical Than the Bowhead.

Whales are rarely thought of as vocalists, yet according to Miss A. D. Cameron in "The New North" they really have a distinctive song of their own.

A certain Captain Kelly was the first to notice that whales sing. One Sunday, while officers from three whaling ships were "gamming" over their after-noon walrus meat, Kelly started up with "I hear a bowhead!" There was much chaffing about "Kelly's band," but Kelly weighed anchor and went to find the band wagon. Every sail followed his, with the result that three whales were bagged.

Among bowheads this singsong is a call that the leader of the school, as he forces a passage through Bering sea, makes in order to notify those that follow that the straits are clear of ice.

Walrus and seals and all true mammals that have lungs and live in the water have a bark that sounds strange enough as it comes up from hidden depths. Every lookout from the mast-head notices that when one whale is struck the whole school is "galled" or stampeded at the very impact of the harpoon; they have heard the death song.

The sound that the bowhead makes is like the long drawn out "hoo-hoo-oo-oo" of the hoot owl. A whaler says that the cry begins on F and may rise to A, B or even C before slipping back to F again. He assures us that with the humpback the tone is much finer and sounds across the water like the note from the E string of a violin.

Dublin Book Pirates.

Dublin is rich in literary associations and during the eighteenth century was a busy publishing center. Some of its enterprises, however, were not of a very reputable kind. Ireland was then outside the copyright laws and English books were "pirated" in Dublin as freely as afterward in America. Some Dublin publishers are said to have kept spies in the London printing houses and by this means were able to issue "pirated" editions of important books coincidently with and sometimes even before the appearance of the authentic issue.—London Chronicle

Defining a Fathom.

"A fathom," explained a schoolteacher to her class in mathematics, "is a nautical word used in defining distance. It means six feet. Now, I want some little girl to give me a sentence using the word 'fathom.'" Instantly a hand shot up. "Well, Mary, you may give your sentence." Mary stood up proudly. "The reason flies can walk on the ceiling," said the observant child, "is because they have a fathom."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

A CUTE DEVICE

By SADIE OLCOTT

At Monte Carlo there is a shop where they rent such articles as men or women need to assist them to cut a swath. These things are usually jewels. For a consideration the proprietor will loan a diamond brooch, a pearl necklace, and when a countess comes along who has parted with her diadem to the pawnbroker she may rent one for the occasion. There are too many persons visiting Monte Carlo who are either sharpers or gentlemen and ladies in financial distress to warrant trusting them with valuable articles for which they have not deposited security; therefore the borrower is usually shadowed by a detective. The shadower of men is usually a man, while the shadower of women is a woman.

I, a woman belonging at that time to the detective staff of Ludwig Switzhoff, loaner, was called one day into the proprietor's office and directed to watch a lady who had borrowed an expensive diamond circlet to be worn on the head. She represented herself as the Baroness von Mehnstein, a German title that had fallen into poverty. The baroness—so Herr Switzhoff told me—was trying to restore the position of the family by a marriage with a rich man. She was strikingly handsome and looked every inch a noble. Lastly, she had her eye on an English cotton spinner, who was immensely wealthy, and expected to land him.

Mr. Hugh Partridge, as the man wrote his name on the books of the hotel, was to be seen every evening at the gambling tables and was often accompanied by the baroness. One evening I noticed that Mr. Partridge was losing. I had often seen him win, but never before had I seen him lose. The next evening he was at the tables again and again lost. It occurred to me that he had struck a run of bad luck, and if he should turn out not to be the wealthy man he represented himself to be he might borrow the baroness' circlet, on which to raise money to tide him over. I therefore reported to my employer that I thought there was some risk in leaving the circlet with the baroness.

He relieved me from the duty of shadowing her and put me on another case.

My duties still led me to the gambling salon, and there I continued to see Mr. Partridge. One evening I saw him losing. It did not seem to me that he was losing heavily, but by the expression on his face one would suppose that he had lost a fortune. Finally he staked his last franc and it was absorbed by the bank. He arose from the table, and the baroness, who had meanwhile entered, strove to soothe him, for he seemed to have broken down completely. I noticed the manager looking at him anxiously. They fear suicide in such cases in Monte Carlo, and it hurts their business.

A person I was shadowing left the gambling hall at the same time as Mr. Partridge. I followed her to her hotel and, turning, retraced my steps. Suddenly in the gardens surrounding the gambling hall I heard a shot. It was so near me that I went in the direction from which the sound seemed to come and had not gone fifty yards before I saw a man lying with his face in the full glare of one of the lamps. It was Mr. Partridge. Before I reached him I heard footsteps and hurriedly turned aside behind some bushes. One of the men employed at the gambling hall dashed past me, and I saw him stoop over the suicide's body and stuff a roll of bills into his pocket. I knew very well what this was for—it was to remove the impression that the man had killed himself on account of gambling losses.

I stood perfectly still, waiting for the men to go away. No sooner had their footsteps died in the distance than the suicide got up, took the bills from his pocket, glanced over them in the lamplight and then, with a grunt of satisfaction, walked away. He had played a very neat game.

I knew that he would leave Monte Carlo at once and considered my employer in danger of losing her circlet, for the baroness was undoubtedly either the dupe or the confederate of a common swindler. Deeming it my duty to warn him as soon as possible, I went to his house. He directed the men in his employ to search for the baroness and demand the return of his property in her possession. They started at once in different directions, one going to her hotel, others to places where she was likely to be found.

But the baroness had left on a late train that had departed about twenty minutes after the suicide of the cotton spinner. The telegraph was used, but either she had traveled in disguise or left the train or used some other expedient to outwit those who might get on her track. At any rate, my employer heard nothing more of her or his circlet.

I left his service soon after that and went to Paris. One evening I was in one of the elegant hotels on Rue Rivoli when whom should I see languishing in a splendid costume but the baroness, the admired of many admirers. I asked who she was and was informed that she was the wife of a Roman prince. Surely she never assumed to be any one of low degree. I communicated with her through another and suggested the return of the circlet or she might be exposed. The circlet was given up, and I sent it to Mr. Switzhoff. The lady thought it prudent to leave Paris at once.

The Fuel Supply Needs Attention Only Three Times Each Day

The makers of Cole's Hot Blast Heater guarantee this stove to hold fire with soft coal 36 hours without attention. Your old stove and imitation stoves leak air and waste fuel because they are not air-tight, because they have putty joints.

Cole's Original Hot Blast Heater

—by means of the patented Hot Blast Draft and other patented features which make it tight, doing away with the use of stove putty—requires less attention than any other heater made.

All fuel—Soft Coal, Hard Coal, Lignite, Wood or Corn Cobs—contains a large amount of gas. Fully one-half of the heating power (carbon) in soft coal is gas. This is the part of the fuel this wonderful heater saves, by burning it with the Top Hot Blast Draft. This makes Cole's Hot Blast Heater the most satisfactory, the most economical, the most convenient heater you can buy. Imitations and other styles of stoves allow this gas-half of the coal to pass up the chimney with the smoke, unburned.

Thousands of these stoves are in use and the sale continues to increase year after year.

This heater will give you more comfort than you ever thought possible by using any kind of a stove which uses soft coal for fuel.

Right now is the time to decide and select the size you should have. Come in and see complete line of styles and sizes.

Open Air Schools Show Rapid Growth

With the opening of the fall school term, over 200 open air schools and fresh air classes for tuberculous, and anemic children, and also for all children in certain rooms and grades, will be in operation in various parts of the United States, according to a statement published by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

All of these schools, the association says, have been established since January, 1907, when the first institution of this character was opened in Providence, R. I. On January 1st, 1910, there were only 13 open air schools in this country and a year later the number had increased only to 29. Thus, the real growth in this movement has been within the last two years.

Massachusetts now leads the states with 86 fresh air schools and classes for tuberculous, anemic and other school children, Boston alone having over eighty. New York comes next with 29, and Ohio is third with 21. Open air schools have now been established in nearly 40 cities in 19 different States.

Based on figures of population and mortality furnished by the United States Bureau of the Census, it is estimated that not less than 100,000 children now in school in the United States will die of tuberculosis before they are eighteen years of age, or that about 7000 of the children die annually from this one disease. Estimating that on an average each child who dies from tuberculosis has had six years of schooling, the aggregate loss to this country in wasted education each year amounts to well over $1,000,000.

This loss and much of the incident suffering could be materially decreased if open air schools or classes for these children and those who are sickly and anemic were provided. The National Association estimates that there should be one such school for every 25,000 population, especially in cities.

"Elixir of Youth Found"

A remarkable series of experiments, first conducted on his old mother, then on himself, and later on 50 of his intimate friends, has enabled Dr. Frank R. Starkey, one of the prominent physicians of Philadelphia, to discover an extract made from various ductless glands that will prolong life for a period of years and make old persons appear much younger.

In fact, it is an elixir of youth that he has found, although he objects to his polyglandular extract being given that name.

Starkey's preparation consists of extracts from several ductless glands in various parts of the body. He has taken extracts from the much talked of pituitary gland, in the base of the skull, which influences the growth of the body. He has taken extracts from the thyroid gland, which influences the flesh and tissue development of the body, and also from glands in reproductive organs.

The combination of these extracts, Starkey had found, increases the cell reproduction of the body, purifies the blood and gives added vitality to the nervous system.

His first experiments were made several years ago on his mother, who although 70 years old is as active and appears to be as youthful as a woman of 50.

If it were possible to follow the suggestion lately made by Senator Gore, in one of his incisive campaigning speeches, to put on every article sold in our shops two tags, one setting forth the price plus the tariff tax, and the other the price less the tax, it would have a most wholesome educative force. Against that form of persuasion the clamorous appeals of the stand-patters for a continuance of tariff extortion would not stand for a fortnight. The seductive quality in tariff taxation is that it is levied at the custom house on imported stuffs and at the factory on home-made goods. When the tariffed article finally passes from the hand of the retailer to the hand of the purchaser the tax is collected without the knowledge of either party to the transaction. If my lady were once made aware of how much the cost of her finery is tax and how much actual intrinsic value she would make it hot for my lord for the next forty days.—Philadelphia Record.

Hotels Charge for Bread

The Hotel Association of New York City last week hoisted the annual cost of living $30,000,000 to its guests. No more free bread. No more free butter. No more single portions of anything served to two persons, and hereafter you must order "per person." By a "couvert" charge of 10 cents per meal the hotels expect to rake in thousands of dollars.

It is estimated by the hotel men that there are 250,000 persons in that city living in hotels. To get 10 cents three times a day at each meal from these guests aggregates $75,000, which is clear gain for the bonifaces, as they will be charging for what they used to give away.

How much the hotels can save by forcing guests to order "per person" and not serving one portion to two persons has not as yet been figured out in dollars, but it will run into the hundreds of thousands. There will be no more "large portions" at a slightly reduced price as formerly, and every guest will have to order for himself or herself alone.

Fred Reed, proprietor of the Park Avenue Hotel, said: "With butter at 41 cents a pound, flour at $6 a barrel, we simply had to stop giving it away. We are now charging our guests for what they have to pay at every hotel in Europe, and the practice has reached Boston a year ago, and some of our leading New York clubs, including the Union League and the Manhattan."

The Latest Comet

An unknown comet was lately discovered by an Australian astronomer, and was named "Gale's Comet" in honor of its discoverer.

The comet has now been seen in this country, by Prof. Brooks, of Geneva, N. Y., the great comet discoverer. It is in the constellation Libra, near the star Beta.

It seems to be coming toward the earth, but is too faint yet to be seen without a telescope. Prof. Brooks thinks it is one of those "parabolic" comets that visit the sun once and never return.

Cole's Hot Blast Heater Is Guaranteed to be a Money Saver

It is guaranteed to save a third in fuel over any lower draft stove of the same size, and we have a letter from the Cole Manufacturing Co. to this effect. Besides this, Cole's Hot Blast burns any kind of fuel, soft coal, lignite, hard coal, crushed coke, wood or cobs. Don't wait until the season is well on and the cold weather is here before investigating the merits of this remarkable heater. We have them on hand and will be glad to show them to you! The price runs from $12.00 up. (B-14)

Methods of seeing the wonderful Crater Lake National Park in Oregon, the principal attraction of which is a beautiful lake situated in the crater of an extinct volcano, are described in a circular entitled "General Information Regarding Crater Lake National Park," just issued by the Department of the Interior. This park is situated on the summit of the Cascade Range in south-central Oregon. It has an area of 159,380 acres and is located in the midst of a beautiful mountain country, the principal attraction being Crater Lake, a body of water having an area of 204 square miles (water front) which is situated in the caldera which range from 500 to 2,000 feet in height. The coloring of the water and of the surrounding cliffs presents some of the most striking pictures seen in the western mountain country. The park is under the control of the Secretary of the Interior, who is represented in the actual administration of the park by a superintendent and a limited number of park rangers.

This circular, which may be obtained on application to the Secretary of the Interior, contains a tourist map of the park, information concerning hotels, camps and principal points of interest, a list of books and magazine articles, and the rules and regulations for the protection of the reservation.

MEN'S

All-Wool Suits
$10 (Ten Dollars) $10

MEN, here is the clothing treat of the season!

These "Morris Special" Ten Dollar Suits are absolutely all pure wool worsteds in dark blue, fancy striped, and wine tinted patterns.

The cloth is made by The American Woolen Company's "Washington Mills" and woven from long stranded yarn that knows no betterment—test it any way you know—that much for the cloth.

The coats are single-breasted three button models, trimmed with mohair serge lining to match, and a double warped saaten in the sleeves. The pockets are doubly reinforced, with an extra stay to give added strength, and the inside has hair cloth front, which insures shape keeping.

Vests are six button style, trimmed with white corded silk edging on the collar, and lined to match the coat.

Plans for Big Show and Meeting

The annual meetings and show of the State Horticultural Society and affiliated agricultural association, which will be held in the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore, November 19th to 23rd, bid fair to be the largest and best ever held in the State. A special effort is being made to show commercial packs of fruit and vegetables. Many barrels and boxes of apples are already in cold storage, and a large quantity will be shipped direct to the Armory prior to opening of the show. A large and attractive exhibit of grains from all parts of the State is promised.

A special feature of the show this year will be club exhibits. Several Farmers' Clubs and Grange Organizations in different parts of the State are planning to make club exhibits of agricultural products. Special prizes for such exhibits are announced. Best Club Exhibit, $60; 2nd, $25; 3rd, $15 4th, $10. This is a great opportunity for publicity and advertisement of any county or local community in the State.

In books that a club may erect, the attractive features of land transportation facilities, good roads, social environment and above all organization of the community can be illustrated, which will appeal to persons desiring to locate in the country. The aim of the show and meetings is educational, but there is also opportunity for growers to advertise their products and sections of the State in which they live.

Let every farmer plan to have something in the exhibit and arrange to visit Baltimore during the week, to attend the meetings of the various organizations.

Walker-Muir Wedding

A pretty home wedding on Monday night of last week was that of Miss Edna S. Muir, daughter of Mr. Harry Muir, to Mr. Walter L. Walker, which took place at 8.30 o'clock at the home of the bride, Antioch avenue extended.

The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. J. Howard Gray, pastor of Antioch Methodist Episcopal Church, Princess Anne, was witnessed only by the immediate friends of the family, and was followed by a small reception. The bride who was given away by her father, wore a navy blue gown and carried a bouquet of white bride roses. Mr. and Mrs. Walker left on the mid-night express for a wedding trip which will be spent in Philadelphia and other cities in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Walker is employed as a traveling salesman for the National Biscuit Company and as his occupation takes him largely into the lower peninsula, the newly wedded couple will not go to housekeeping during the winter.

William H. Hoover, a farmer near Elkton, last week picked ripe strawberries and raspberries from his vines.

DEMOCRATIC MEETING

A Large Gathering in Princess Anne Saturday to Hear Covington and McGillicuddy

The Democratic mass meeting advertised for last Saturday afternoon brought a large number of people to Princess Anne. The Auditorium was filled when the hour for the meeting arrived and a number of ladies graced the occasion. The Crisfield Brass Band furnished fine music both at the Auditorium and on the lawn in front of the Court House prior to the meeting. The meeting was called to order by S. Frank Dashiell, chairman of the County Central Committee, and was presided over by Mr. Henry J. Waters, in his usual graceful manner. Mr. C. A. Lankford, of Upper Fairmount, was made secretary.

The first speaker was Hon. J. Harry Covington, of Easton, Md., who is the Democratic candidate for re-election to Congress from the First Congressional District. Mr. Covington made a short but strong speech. The comments heard after the meeting were of a most favorable character and his speech was regarded as one of the best ever heard in this town on the tariff question. His speech was interspersed with apt illustrations of how the people are robbed by the great trusts through the intervention of a high tariff. The most forcible illustration was given by reference to advertisements taken from the Saturday Evening Post, which the Congressman had been looking over on the train on his way home from Pennsylvania where he had been campaigning.

Mr. Covington used several of these to show that some of the largest manufacturing concerns of this country were advertising their goods for sale all over the world and yet in spite of large sales they were still using the argument of the necessity for a high tariff to enable them to continue business. The speaker claimed that if such concerns could sell goods abroad at a good profit and had a wide market and plenty of sales, it was odd that it was necessary for them to charge a higher price for their wares in this country than they could get abroad. He claimed that the condition of affairs conclusively showed that it was not the plea of competition for their workman that guided them in their business but the desire of making more money and that by robbing the people through the government's help. He said it was high time the people were waking up to the true state of affairs and heading off the growing power of great moneyed concerns who are linked in partnership with the present Republican administration. Mr. Covington derided the promises of President Taft and his party to revise the tariff downward and said that their policy was always to revise it upward. The speaker wound up his talk by cheering words as to the outcome of the present campaign which he claimed was going to be a landslide for Wilson and Marshall.

The second speaker of the occasion was the Hon. Daniel J. McGillicuddy, Congressman-elect from Maine. This gentleman was a member of the committee in the last Congress to investigate the doings of the great Steel Trust; he was therefore possessed of much inside information on this subject and used many valuable illustrations to show how trusts are brought into existence and how their methods enrich their members at the expense of the people.

Mr. McGillicuddy is full of dry wit and his hearers were caused to laugh more than once by his use of it. Mr. McGillicuddy was not feeling well and therefore spoke but about 20 minutes but in that time he went deep into his subject and those who heard him were impressed with his knowledge of business and political conditions.

The meeting, though short, was regarded as one of the best held here for a long time. The speakers left by automobile late in the afternoon for Crisfield where they held a similar meeting the same night.

Elderice Wants Debate

Rev. Charles M. Elderice, of Federalburg, prohibition candidate for Congress in the First Maryland district, has sought to have the other candidates for Congress—J. Harry Covington, of Talbot, the sitting Democrat, and Robert D. Grier, of Salisbury, the Bull Moose nominee—meet him in joint debate.

Mr. Covington declined because his speaking dates in the campaign were taken up. Mr. Grier replied that he could see nothing to debate, as the platforms of the Progressives and Prohibitionists are practically identical in declaration for reform and uplift. Mr. Elderice has been making a campaign through the district with the nominee for Vice President, Aaron S. Watkins, and expects to swell his party vote much above his poll in 1910 of a little over 1,000.

WILSON GAINS VOTES

Reports From Counties and City Wards Show That He Will Get State by 40,000

Final reports of conditions in all the counties of the State and wards of Baltimore received by the Democrats who are managing the campaign indicate that Gov. Woodrow Wilson will carry Maryland by 40,000 plurality.

This comparatively large plurality will be unprecedented. The managers declare that it will be due to the fact that Governor Wilson will receive the normal Democratic vote plus nearly all of the independents, while the normal Republican vote will be split between Roosevelt and Taft. Former Governor Frank Brown received 30,000 majority when the Republicans were united.

Despite the confident assertions which have been made by managers or the Bull Moose and Republican candidates in Maryland that they expected large defections from the Democratic vote, the developments of the last few days have in the judgment of unbiased critics, clearly outlined the situation.

Whitcraft—Regester

Miss Louise Virginia Regester, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Church Regester, and Franklin Pierce Whitcraft, Jr., were married Wednesday night, at 7.30 o'clock, in Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, Baltimore, by Rev. Lynn Harold Hough.

The church was decorated with ferns and potted plants. The bride entered the church upon the arm of her father and was met at the altar by the groom and his brother, Mr. L. N. Whitcraft, of Princess Anne, Md., who was best man. The bride wore a handsome gown of white satin. Miss Edna Regester, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a rich costume of purplesatin. The ushers were John Duncan, Charles Carver, Janney Smith and Warren A. Stewart. A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, at Roland Park. Mr. and Mrs. Whitcraft will make their home at the Hampton Court Apartments.

Honor to Mrs. Wilson

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Miss Jessie Wilson, wife and daughter of the Democratic Presidential nominee, spent a busy day last Friday as the guests of Baltimore women, renewing old friendship, seeing the city and attending a luncheon at the Belvedere given by the Women's Wilson League in their honor.

Mrs. Wilson was taken on an automobile ride through Green Spring Valley, while Miss Wilson spent the morning with friends of her college days at Goucher College. Late Friday afternoon Mrs. and Miss Wilson paid a brief call at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Ira Remsen to meet Sir William and Lady Ramsey, in whose honor Dr. and Mrs. Remsen gave a reception.

Mrs. Wilson and daughter left for their home at Princeton, N. J., at 5 o'clock stopping off at Wilmington, Del., where they were guests at a large reception in their honor.

It Looks Very Much Like Wilson

The New York Herald published a straw vote of individuals in 24 States, which showed that of 154,771 votes polled 65,168 will vote for Woodrow Wilson, Democrat, for President; 46,316 for Roosevelt, Progressive; 33,769 for Taft, Republican, and 9,528 for Debs Socialist. The poll showed a net Republican loss from 1908 of 25,299, a net Democratic gain of 1,500. Taft loses 18,863 to Roosevelt and 9,322 to Wilson. Roosevelt takes 3,067 of the Bryan vote and 503 of the Socialist total of 1908.

The Delaware Ballot

Three new emblems will appear upon the Delaware ballot this year, in addition to the usual Democratic, Republican, Socialist and Prohibition tickets. These will be a bull moose, the emblem of the original Progressive party, filed under the name of the Progressive party of Delaware; the scales of justice, symbolizing the National Progressive party, and the Goddess of Liberty, which will head an entirely new ticket, known as the Independent Democratic party. The last named party supports all the ticket except that for the Legislature.

Wilson Day October 31st

Democratic headquarters at New York announce that it is intended to make Thursday, October 31st, "Wilson Day." It is planned to have meetings in every large city in the United States, at which parts of Governor Wilson's speech in Madison Square Garden, flashed by wire to the various meetings, will be read to the audiences.

WARSHIPS REVIEWED

Million Spectators see the Great Naval Parade Down the Hudson River

Never before has such an armada been brought together for review in American waters as that represented by the 15-mile long string of war vessels that filed past President Taft and Secretary of the Navy Meyer last Tuesday, the crowning day of the great mobilization of the Atlantic fleet, on the Hudson River, N. Y. The aggregate tonnage of the craft exceeded 700,000, as compared with 576,684 tons represented in the naval mobilization there last year.

Several hours were consumed in the exchange of official visits and in the final arrangements for the great parade of the gray armada that for nearly a week had swung at anchor in the Hudson. Finally the booming of a gun announced to the thousands of waiting spectators that the great naval spectacle was about to begin.

The battleship Connecticut, flagship of Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, commander-in-chief of the fleet, led the line down the river and out into the harbor. Following the Connecticut came the latest and greatest battleships of the United States Navy, the new superdreadnoughts Arkansas and Wyoming. The dreadnoughts Utah, North Dakota, Delaware, Michigan and South Carolina looked fully as formidable to the lay spectator as the Arkansas and Wyoming. The older type of battleship was represented by the Missouri, Maine, Illinois, Wisconsin, Alabama, Louisiana, Kansas, Vermont, New Hampshire, Virginia, Nebraska, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Georgia, Minnesota, Ohio, Idaho, Indiana, Massachusetts, Iowa, Kearsarge and Kentucky.

It estimated that the jacksies spent about $800,000 during the eight days the ships of the fleet were anchored in New York. Many of them who were scheduled for long cruises took time by the forelock and did their Christmas shopping.

More than 1,000,000 persons saw the gigantic line of warships steam from their anchorages down the Hudson and down the bay to the Atlantic.

The departure of the great fleet brought to an end the greatest naval spectacle ever seen by New York or any other American city, and as the $250,000,000 worth of marine war machinery passed sea flags were displayed from government buildings and from hundreds of public buildings along the Hudson.

Goldsborough to Stump State

Governor Goldsborough announced last Wednesday that he will stump the State in behalf of the candidacy of President Taft for re-election. As far as is possible he will make speeches at every important point in the State. Republicans are now thoroughly aroused to the absolute necessity of putting more ginger into the campaign. For the remaining two weeks hustle and bustle will be in evidence in every quarter. Most encouraging reports of the drift to President Taft are being received from the counties at State headquarters, says the Baltimore American.

Mr. A. Lincoln Dryden, of Somerset county, while in Baltimore last week, said that Colonel Roosevelt will not poll over one-half of the 200 votes cast for him in the presidential primaries in Somerset. He said that not a dozen colored voters in the county will support the Progressive candidate.

Boy's Heroism Cost His Life

Willie Rugh, the newsboy who a few weeks ago at Gray, Indiana, allowed surgeons to amputate his crippled leg that sufficient skin might be obtained to graft upon the burned body of Miss Ethel Smith, died at Gray Hospital at 2 o'clock Friday morning. Up to Thursday night the physicians in charge said that he was making satisfactory progress and that he would recover. Later however, he had a sinking spell and died soon afterward.

The last words of the newsboy before he sank into a state of coma were: "I'm glad I did it. Tell her I hope she gets well, quick, doc."

Exams for Rhodes Scholarship

Five young men, one of whom will receive, next January, news extremely pleasant to him, began Monday of last week at the Johns Hopkins University to take their examination for the Rhodes scholarship. The winner will be entitled to three years of study in old Oxford University, England, the scholarship giving the winner $1,500 a year to support him while he studies. Announcement of the name of the winner will be made next January.

COL. ROOSEVELT SHOT

By John Schrank in Milwaukee Would-Be Assassin Arrested—Roosevelt In Hospital

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was shot and seriously wounded on Monday night of last week at Milwaukee, as he was leaving the Gilpatrick Hotel for the Auditorium to make a speech. The wound was believed to be slight, and the Colonel went on to the hall and began his speech after he had seen the assailant arrested and taken to the police station. After the meeting Colonel Roosevelt was taken to the Emergency Hospital for examination.

The would-be assassin was seized by Henry F. Cochems, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the Progressive party, who held him until policemen came up. A mob surged around the prisoner, who apparently is mentally upset on the subject of Roosevelt's running for another term as President, and it required the services of four policemen to keep him from being dealt with summarily.

The Colonel felt no pain at the time the shot was fired and was not aware that he was shot until he was on the way to the Auditorium. His attention was then called to a hole in his overcoat, and he found that his shirt was soaked with blood. He insisted that he was not hurt badly.

Colonel Roosevelt's life probably was saved by a manuscript of the speech which he delivered the same evening. The bullet struck the manuscript, which retarded its force as it passed through into the flesh. His assailant was prevented from firing a second shot by Mr. Cochems, a former football star, who tackled and downed him in his tracks.

In spite of the entreaties of physicians, Colonel Roosevelt insisted upon delivering his address.

"I will make this speech or die—one or the other," he said.

Almost a panic ensued when the crowd at the Auditorium was told that Colonel Roosevelt had been shot, but he calmed the people by rising and assuring them that he was not badly hurt. Then he began his address. Several times he seemed to be growing weak, and members of his party rose to help him. He motioned them to sit down.

"Let me alone; I'm all right," he said, and immediately began his address.

Immediately upon concluding, he was taken to the Emergency Hospital, where six physicians examined his wound. They found it impossible to determine the depth to which the bullet had penetrated his breast, and it was decided to take an X-ray photograph.

The Colonel left the same night for Chicago, when he was taken to Mercy Hospital, where it was thought he would have to remain 10 or 15 days at least. All his political engagements were canceled.

The formal confession, taken before a stenographer, of John Schrank, Roosevelt's would-be assassin, was given out last Tuesday night by the police department.

Schrank said he started from New York on September 21 for Charleston and left his grip there. From Charleston he went to Augusta and from there to Atlanta, to Birmingham, to Chattanooga, to Nashville, to Evansville, Louisville, Chicago and then to Milwaukee, arriving there Monday at 1 o'clock. He made the trip because he wanted to meet Roosevelt.

But Roosevelt, Schrank continued, escaped him every time, going into a hall one way and coming out another, and getting away.

He said he had lived in New York about 25 years and had been in the liquor business. He was not a married man, and was 36 years old, he said, owning property in New York assessed at $25,000.

"Colonel Roosevelt," he said, "escaped me in Atlanta and Chattanooga; he would go in a hall one way and out another way. I wanted to put him out of the way because a man who wishes a third term has no right to live."

He bought the revolver in New York on September 21, with the intention of shooting Colonel Roosevelt. He declared he was not affiliated with any political party. When given a hearing he entered a plea of guilty. This plea, however, may be withdrawn before his trial.

Auto Age Limit Upheld

No person under 18 years old may operate an automobile or secure a license to run one in this State, according to a decision handed down by Judge Duncan in the Circuit Court of Towson last week. The opinion was the result of the test case of John P. Sadler, of Cockeysville, a boy not 18 years old.

TURKS DECLARE WAR

Formal Declaration Against Serbia and Bulgaria Made—Fighting in Progress

The formal declaration of war against Serbia and Bulgaria was published by the Turkish government at Constantinople last Thursday.

Hostilities were opened Thursday morning by the Turkish troops at various points on the Bulgarian and Serbian frontiers. The divisions of the Turkish army were ordered to make a simultaneous forward movement. In giving the order for a general advance the Ottoman War Minister mentioned only that the movement was to be made against the frontiers of Bulgaria and Serbia. There is a powerful Turkish army concentrated near the Greek frontier, but this has not yet been put into motion.

The Ottoman government Thursday morning handed the Serbian and Bulgarian Ministers their passports, and they will leave immediately.

Now that war in the Balkans has been formally begun the French press insists upon the necessity of a complete accord among the European Powers. The fear is expressed that should covetousness and antagonism develop among the nations of Europe as the result of the opportunities for aggrandizement arising out of the trouble in the Balkan peninsula, the world may see the bloodiest war in history. France's efforts to bring about a speedy peace should, therefore, it is pointed out, be welcomed by the other countries of Europe.

Governor Wilson Visits Delaware

The special train consisting of six of the finest steel constructed coaches that have ever pulled out of the Pennsylvania railroad station, at Wilmington, which conveyed Governor Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey, Democratic candidate for President of the United States, left French street station, Wilmington, at exactly 8.10 o'clock Thursday morning. Many persons were at the station in the hope of seeing Governor Wilson, but they were disappointed, owing to the fact that the distinguished statesman was still sleeping in his private car.

Fourteen Wilmingtonians and a representative of a Philadelphia newspaper occupied the special car next to Governor Wilson's private car, and the remainder of the coaches were empty to Harrington.

In Mr. Wilson's private car, in addition to himself, were his private secretary and staff. The special train was greeted with great enthusiasm on its trip down the State. The news of its coming had preceded the train and large crowds were gathered at every station and crossings anxious to get a glimpse of the Presidential nominee.

The Governor's tour was like a triumphal march and the crowds which appeared in every town at which he stopped demonstrated the great popularity of the Democratic standard-bearer and the anxiety of the voters to hear him expound the questions of the day. His reception was the most enthusiastic and spontaneous ever accorded a Presidential candidate in Delaware and made certain the addition of the three electoral votes of the State to the Democratic column.

The turnout at Wilmington Thursday night was the largest political gathering ever held in the State, Wilmington Democrats to the number of 5000 parading through streets lined by 30,000 persons, who cheered the candidate, waved flags, banners, redfire and torches at him.

Red Sox Victorious

The Boston Red Sox, pennant-winners of the American League, are the world's champions of 1912. Defeating the New York Nationals last Wednesday by a score of 3 to 2 in 10 innings of a bitterly fought struggle, they captured their fourth victory of the world's series and carried off the premier honors in baseball. The Giants won three games of the series that was played before more than a quarter of a million people and one contest was a tie. The total receipts for the eight games were $490,833 and each Red Sox player received $4,024, while the Giant players each came in for $2,566.

New Clerk For Appeal Court

Formal announcement was made last Thursday of the resignation of William T. Brantly, of Baltimore, for the last 18 years' reporter of the Maryland Court of Appeals, Annapolis. The court appointed William H. Perkins, also of Baltimore, to succeed Mr. Brantly. Mr. Perkins has been serving in the position for the past year, the court having granted Mr. Brantly a year's leave.

Some Time Later.

The little Norman Isle, home of Pierre Laroche, so wild and bleak-looking many months of the year, resembles a flowering garden in the spring; then, its lap full of buds and blossoms, smiling, redolent, it lifts itself from the broad bosom of the deep. And all the light embellishments of the golden time it sets forth faintly; fringing the black cliffs with clusters of sea campion, white and frothy as the spray, trailing green ivy from precipitous heights to the verge of the wooing waters, whose waves seem to creep up thimorously, peep into the many caves, bright with sea-anemones, and retreat quickly, as awed by a sudden glimpse of fairyland.

Near the entrance of one of these magical chambers, abloom with strange, scentless flowers, sat, a certain afternoon in April, a man and a woman, both looking over the blue sea, conversed in desultory fashion.

"From what your father tells me, Mistress Nanette," the man, an aged priest, was speaking, "the Seigneur Desaurac should be here today."

"My father had a letter from him a few days ago to that effect," answered the young woman somewhat shortly.

"Let me see," apparently the old man did not notice the change in his companion's manner, "he has been away now about a year? It was in July he brought the Governor's daughter to the island one day and called the next!" Nanette made a movement. "How time flies!" she sighed. "Let us hope it assuages grief, as they say! You think she is contented here?"

"The Lady Elise? Why not? At least, she seems so; has with her, her old nurse, my aunt, who fortunately escaped from the Mount—"

"But the death of her father? It must have been a terrible blow—one not easy to forget!"

"Of course," said Nanette slowly, "she has felt his loss."

The old man gazed down. "I have sometimes wondered what she knows about the causes of the enmity that existed between his Excellency and the Black Seigneur!"

The other's eyes lifted keenly. "When last did you see her, Father?" "She comes often to my cottage to walk and—"

"Talk?"

"Well, yes! The fine, spiritual face expressed a twinge of uneasiness."

"About the past?"

The priest shifted slightly. "Sometimes! An old man lives much in the past and it is natural to wander on a bit aimlessly at times, and—"

"Confess, Father, she has learned much from you?" Nanette laughed.

"No, no; I trust—"

"Surmised, then?" said the girl. "She is one not easily deceived. Clever is my lady! And you talk, she says nothing, but leads you on! If there's aught she wishes to learn that you know, be assured she's found out from your lips."

"May I not believe—'tis true once written I've let a word slip. But she noticed not—"

"No doubt!" The island girl's voice expressed a fine scorn. "However, it matters little. Speaks she ever of the Black Seigneur?" suddenly.

"No, why?"

"Why not?" Nanette's tone was enigmatic.

"I don't understand."

"At any rate, she is better off here than yonder in France, if tidings be true," said the other irrelevantly.

"Ah, ma belle France!" murmured the old man regretfully. "How she is torn within—threatened from without! But fortunately she has her defenders."

"His voice thrilled, 'brave men who have thronged to her needs. I suppose,' he continued abruptly, 'it's to arrange about the new ship that brings the Seigneur once more to the island?'"

"I suppose so," assented the other briefly.

"A true Frenchman, Pierre Laroche, your father, has shown himself, in giving one of his best ships to the cause! Although perhaps he would not have been so ready," thoughtfully, "had not the Paris Assembly seen fit to appoint Andre Desaurac in command of all the vessels to guard the coast against the intrigues of the French royalists with foreign powers and allies! Well, well, he will find here many old friends!"

"Yourself, for example, Father, who helped him in the courts to establish his right to his name," said the young woman quickly.

"And you, Mistress Nanette," the kindly eyes lighting with a curious, indulgent look, "who went to the Mount alone, unaided, to—"

A frown gathered on the dark, handsome face of the girl. "Unaided?" she said, staring at the sparkles on the waves before her.

"Oh, the people never weary of talking about it and how you—"

"You're a snail!" Abruptly the young woman rose, with skirts fluttering behind her, gazed out to sea.

Several hours later, just before dusk, a ship ran into the harbor, dropped anchor, and sent a boat to the shore. In the small craft sat a number of men, and the first of these to spring to the beach and mount the stone stairway to the inn, was met at the top; warmly greeted, by old Pierre himself! Mon dieu! To see the newcomer was like old times! Only now, the landlord observed festively, the profits would be small! But a fig to parsimony, in these days when men's patriotism should be large; do what he, the Black Seigneur, would with the new ship, even if he sunk her, provided it was in good company, and he went down with her himself! To which protestations the other answered; presented his companions, and greeted the assembled company within.

Busy at a great board, laden with comestibles interspersed with flagons of wine, Nanette welcomed him briefly, and again his glance—keen and assured, that of a man the horizon of whose vision had widened, since last he stood there—swept the gathering. But apparently, one he looked for was not present, and he had again turned to the young woman, a question on his lips, when on the garden side of the house a door opened. It revealed a flowering background, a plateau, yellow in the last rays of the sun; it framed, also, the slender, black-clad figure of a girl, above whose white brow the waving hair shone like threads of gold.

"An old friend of yours, my Lady!" called out blunt Pierre.

A moment the clear, brown eyes seemed to waver; then became steady, as schooled to some purpose. She came forward composedly; gave the Black Seigneur her hand.

"I am always glad to see old friends!" said my lady, with a lift of the head, over-conscious, perhaps, of the concentrated gaze of the company.

He looked at her; made perfunctory answer; she seemed about to speak again, when the hand he let fall was caught by another.

"Elise!" From among those who had come ashore, a man in fashionable attire sprang forward, a little thinner than when last she had seen him, and more cynical-looking, as slightly soured by world-contact and the new tendencies of society.

"My Lord!" Certainly was my lady taken unawares; a moment looked at the Marquis as if a little startled; then at the Black Seigneur:

"A pleasant surprise for you, my Lady!" said the latter. "But you owe me no thanks! An order from the chief of the Admiralty, properly signed and countersigned, directing me to transport the Marquis de Beauvilliers hither, was not to be disregarded!"

"A somewhat singular dispensation of Providence, nevertheless!" observed the nobleman dryly. "After our—what shall we call it?—little passage of arms! You must acknowledge, however, that in truth the Lady Elise and myself had some reason to discredit your assurances that night—"

"Far be it from me to dispute it, my Lord," and the Black Seigneur turned, while the Marquis, slightly shrugging his shoulders, addressed my lady.

Half blithely, then half bitterly, replying occasionally from the old, debonaire manner he had assumed, he spoke of his escape from the Mount; months of hiding in foul places, amid fields and forest, with no word of her; his success, at last, in reaching Paris, and, through rumor, learning where she was, and hastening to her—

A blunt voice interrupted further explanations and avowals; the steaming flesh-pots, it informed the company, awaited not soft words and honeyed phrases; monarch in his own dining-room, ostentatiously conscious, perhaps, of his own unwonted prodigality, Pierre Laroche waved them to their places—where they would!—so that they waited not!

Quizzically my lord lifted his brow; truly here was a Republican fellow who appreciated not an honor when it was bestowed upon him, nor saw anything unusual in a Marquis's presence beneath that humble roof. Something of this he murmured to my lady, in a tone others might have heard; but she answered not; took her place, with red lips the firmer, as if to conceal some weakness to which they sought to give way.

Not without constraint the meal passed; the host, desirous to learn the latest political news, looked at the Marquis and curbed a natural curiosity, until a more favorable moment when he and the Black Seigneur should be alone. My lady, although generally made to feel welcome and at home there, seemed now, perhaps, to herself, a little out of place, like a person that has wandered from a world of her own and strayed into another's. Cross-currents, long at strife in her breast, surged and flowed fast; the while she seemed to listen to my lord, who appeared now in lighter, more airy humor. And as she sat thus, with fair head bent a little, she could but hear, at times, above the medley of tones and the sound of servants' footsteps in clattering wooden shoes, the voice of the Black Seigneur—now pledging a toast to old Pierre; anon discussing wines, tides, or ships! A free reckless voice, that seemed to vibrate from the past—to stir anew bright, terrible flames.

Daylight slowly waned; lights were brought in, and, the meal over, old Pierre pushed back in his chair. My lady rose quickly; looked a little constrainedly at the company, at the Marquis, then toward the door. Anticipating her desire, attributing to it, perhaps, a significance flattering to his vanity, the young nobleman expressed a wish for a stroll; a sight of the garden. At once she assented; a slight tint now on her cheeks, she moved to the door, and my lord followed; as they disappeared, the Black Seigneur laughed—at one of Pierre's jokes!

"Have I not told it before?" said the host.

"Have you?" murmured the Black Seigneur. "Well, a good jest, like an excellent dish, may well be served twice."

"Humph!" observed the landlord doubtfully. After a pause: "I suppose he will be taking her away soon?"

"Her?" The young man rose. "The Lady Elise!"

"I suppose so," shortly.

"We shall miss her!" grumbled the landlord as he, too, got up and walked over to the fireplace. "I, who never thought to care for any of the fine folk—I, bluff old Pierre Laroche!—say we shall miss her."

"Knows she how it fared with his Excellency—her father's—estate? That little, or nothing, is left?"

"Aye."

"And she will agree to the promise I wrote you about?"

"That you—now that the right to your name has been vindicated—are content to accept half the lands in dispute; her ladyship to retain the other half?"

"Yes; in consideration of that which his Excellency expended in taxes—no small sum!—and what it would cost to carry on vexatious litigation!"

"You are strangely faint-hearted to pursue your advantage," said old Pierre shrewdly. "But," as the other made a gesture, "I put it to her ladyship as you desired me to, and—"

"She consented?" eagerly.

Pierre shook his head. "No, mon capitaine! She will have none of them. And you had heard her: 'A great wrong was unintentionally,' she accented the word, 'done the Seigneur Desaurac by my father, which has now been set right!' It has, I assented, and would have urged further your proposal, when she stopped me. 'Speak no more of this matter!' 'Twas all she said; but—you should have seen her face, and how her eyes shone!"

"The Lady Elise?" he said quickly. "Oh, you are interested? 'A mon beau'—a moment she hummed. 'You do not urge me?'"

"Wherefore," laconically, "when you have made up your mind to tell!"

"You are right!" She threw back her head. "I have made up my mind! How well you understand women! Almost as well," she laughed mockingly, "as a ship!" He made no response.

"When you thanked me once, mon capitaine, for all it pleased you to say I did for you, you may remember," her voice was defiant, "I did not once gainsay you!" More curiously he regarded her. "Perhaps it pleased me," her hand on her hip, "to be thought such a fine heroine. But now," her tone grew a little fierce, "I am tired of hearing people say: 'Nanette risked so much!' Nanette did this!—did that!—when it was she who risked—did it all, one might say."

"She? What do you mean?" The black eyes probed hers now with sudden, fierce questioning.

"That 'twas the Lady Elise saved you. Went knowingly—willingly—as hostage—"

"The Lady Elise!" he cried, an abrupt glow on the dark face.

Nanette's eyes noted and fell, but she went on hurriedly: "She knew of the ambush in the forest; saw part of the note I dropped on the beach—it was brought to her by my aunt who warned her." And in a quick rush of words, as if desirous to be done with it, Nanette told all that had transpired at the Mount.

Incredulously, eagerly, he listened; when, however, she had finished, he said nothing; sat like a man bewildered.

"Well!" said the girl impatiently. Still he looked down. "Well!" she repeated, so sharply old Pierre stirred; lifted his head.

"Eh, my dear?"

"She went to the mantel; took from it a candle."

"Seigneur finds you such poor company," she said, "he desires a light to retire!"

The dawn smote the heavens with fiery lashes of red; from the east the wind began to blow harder, and on the sea the waves responded with a more forcible sweep. At a window in the inn, the Black Seigneur a moment looked out on the gay flowers and the sea and the worn grim face of the cliff; then left his room and made his way downstairs. No one was yet, apparently, astir; an hour or so must elapse ere the time set for departure, and, pending the turn of the tide and advice to old Pierre, the young man stepped into the garden, through the gate, and, turning into a rocky path, strode out over the cliffs. The island was small; its walks limited, and soon, despite a number of difficulties in the way he had chosen, he found himself at its end—the verge of a great rock that projected out over the blue, sullen sea. For some moments he stood there, listening to the sounds in caverns below, watching the snow-capped waves, the ever-shifting spots on a vast map, and then, shaking off his reverie, started to return.

"A brisk wind to take us back to France," he said to himself; but his thoughts were not of possible April storms, or of his ship. His eyes, bright, yet perplexed, as if from some problem whose solution he had not yet found, were bent downward, only to be raised where the path demanded his closer attention. As he looked up, he became suddenly aware of the figure of a girl, who approached from the opposite direction.

A quick glint sprang to the young man's eyes, and, pausing, he waited; watched. At that point, the way ran over a rock, almost eaten through by the hungry sea, and she had already started to cross when he first saw her. The path was not dangerous; nor was it easy; only it called for certainty and assurance on the part of the one that elected to take it. My lady's light footstep was sure; although the wind swept rather sharply there, she held herself with confident poise, while from the brown eyes shone a clear, steady light.

"I saw you leave the inn," she said, drawing near the comparatively sheltered spot, where he stood, "and knowing you would soon sail, followed. There is something I wanted to say."

Unwearying. Sneezing is the best brain clearer known. Many persons conclude an attack of faintness or fainting with a violent sneeze. Our ancestors took snuff from a belief in the efficacy of sneezing. But tobacco so taken is in part absorbed into the blood and hurts the system. Ticking the nostrils with a feather or straw will act as well as taking snuff. Try it when you feel faint. It cannot do harm.

Believable! "Do you know that I had two offers of marriage last week?" asked a plain girl of a friend.

"Oh, I am delighted, dear!" the friend exclaimed. "Then the report that your uncle left you his money is really true?"

Cheerfulness. If there is need of joyousness and good cheer in our words and looks and demeanor it is when we feel least like it and when others about us are most likely to be helped by it.

Patience is the finest and worthiest part of fortitude, and the rarest too.—Buskin.

and—felt I should have no other chance to tell you!

Had she read what was passing in his brain, she would not have faced him, so confident, but ignorant of what he had learned, the cause of which she had never seen, the tender, the strong features, she broached her subject with steadfastness of purpose.

"You went away so suddenly the last time. I had no opportunity, then, to thank you for all that you did; and so, I do now—thank you, I mean!"

Also, a touch of prouder constraint in her tone, "I appreciate your over-generous proposal through Pierre Larocque; although, of course," her figure very straight, "I could not—it was impossible—to entertain it. But I am glad you were able to prove. You will understand—and, my lady ended quickly, "I thank you!"

He looked at her long. "It is I who am in your debt!"

"You?" Her brows lifted.

"Yes."

"I don't think I quite understand."

In spite of herself and her resolution, the proud eyes seemed to shrink from a nameless something in his gaze.

"Nor I! Nanette was talking with me last night!"

"Nanette!"

In words, direct, unequivocal, he told her what he had learned; and although my lady laughed, as at something absurd, and strove to maintain an unvarying mien, his eyes challenged evasion; demanded truth! At that moment the space where they stood seemed, perhaps, too small; to hem her very closely in—too closely—as, drawing back, she touched the hard rocky wall!

"Why?" Still endeavoring to regard him as if the charge could only be preposterous, too unreasonable to answer, she was, nevertheless, conscious of the flame on her face—tacit refutation of the denials in her eyes!

"Why?" she repeated.

"That is just what I was asking myself when I saw you, my lady."

"And, of course, knowing there could be no—that it was too senseless—"

The words she was searching for failed her; she looked toward the path over the neck of rock, but he continued to stand between it and her.

"I have heard the story in all its details; all that passed at the Mount, while Nanette was there. And," instead of having undermined his belief, she felt she had only strengthened it, "I am sure you went to the Monastery St. Raulphe, knowing—"

"You are sure!" she interrupted quickly. "It wasn't long ago you were sure it was I who betrayed you, and—"

"I was wrong, then; but," his eyes continued to meet hers, "I am not wrong now."

Behind her, my lady's hand closed hard on the rock.

"Deny it!" his voice went on. "In so many words!"

"Why should I?" She caught her breath quickly. "I denied something to you once, and you did not believe."

"I'll believe you now!"

"I should feel very much flattered, I am sure; but after—"

A spark of defiance began to gleam in her eyes.

"You are sure one moment, and not the next! You are ready to believe, or not to believe!" More certain now, she lifted her head; she, whose assurance and wit had never failed her at court, would not be put to confusion by him!

His answer was unexpected; to her; to himself. Perhaps it was the peasant—the untamed half-peasant—in his blood that caused it; that made a sudden, unceremonious act, his reply! He caught both her hands; drew her to him. He knew she could never care for him—she, the beautiful lady! But he forgot himself for the moment; thought only of what she had done; her courage, her fineness, her delicate loveliness! Her life for his. To pay a fancied debt, perhaps? And all the while he had thought—Self-reproaches fell from his lips: Followed by bolder, more daring words. All he would have said the night on the beach, when he had borne her from the ferry rock to the ship, now burst from him; all he had felt when he had held her in his arms—motionless, unresisting, the still, white face upturned, offering itself freely to his gaze!

At the neck of the rock, beneath his feet, the waves thundered; near them, wild birds circled, wheeled and were borne on by the strong breath of the wind. Had he spoken; what had he said? A gradual consciousness of the beating of the sea smote his senses, as with rhythmic regularity it arose. He listened; slowly in his eyes that light that demanded—claimed, as it were, its own—was replaced by another; his hands released hers. My lady made no sound; her proud lips trembled. Very pale, she leaned back.

So silence lengthened. "Pardon, my lady!" he said at last, very humbly. "It had not occurred to me my secret was not safe; that I, master of ships and men, should not be master of my self! But I had not expected to be alone with your Ladyship, and," a shadow of a smile crossed the strong, reckless face, "your Ladyship can weigh the provocation! If the excuse will not serve, I have none other to offer. Certainly, will I retract nothing. What's said, is said, and—no lies will unseat it!"

He looked at the water; the tide was nearly in; he turned. She would never see him again, for which she would be very glad, since the sight of him must always have been hateful to her. Had not fate decreed—bitterly—she should look upon him only as an enemy? It might be, in time, she would condone his presumption, but his presence would no longer vex her. He was going one way; she, another, with—

"You—you are mistaken, Mon-

My lady's tone was tremulous.

"Mistaken?"

"The Marquis de Beauvilliers left last night on a fishing bark."

"Why?" She did not answer. "You mean?" Before the sudden swift question that shone from his eyes, hers fell.

"Speak!" He seized her hand; his dark, eager face was near hers now.

"You have sent him away? He will never return?" She lifted her head; answered not in words; but a new light in her eyes met the flash of his.

"My Lady!" he cried, bewildered for the moment at what that glance revealed. An instant she seemed once more striving to combat him, when, drawing her gently toward him, he bent lower; kissed softly her lips.

"Is it, then, true—"

"You find it so hard to believe?"

"That you love me? That I seem no longer your enemy?"

"My enemy? You? Who risked so much—saved my life! Ah, no, no! Do you not remember," softly, "he, too said—'Forget!'"

"I only remember I have long loved you! For me have you ever been the princess—who dwelt in the clouds—in a palace, enchanted—"

Her face changed. "That saddens you! Forgive me!"

"It seems like a dream—that life, then! All made up of lightness and gaiety; courtiers and fine masques, until—"

Beneath the bright gold of her hair, my lady's brow knit.

"Until?"

"Nay; I know not until—just when! Only, for long, I seem to have lived in a world, unreal and false. Last night, when in the garden, I felt stifled. This marriage! Arranged—for what? She made a quick gesture. "The words came—had to come—though they hurt my lord's pride; touched his vanity! Nothing deeper! It was gone. Besides—"

My lady stopped. "Go on!" he urged, his voice eager.

"That is all. At least, all I would acknowledge to myself, then."

"And now?" His arm tightened; he held my lady close. "Now?"

Her lips lifted; though silent, made answer in the abandonment of the moment, the past and all its vicissitudes vanished; only the present held them—the present and the future, beautiful as the horizon, now rosy and glowing beneath the warm touch of the dawn.

The tide came in and the tide went out.

"Mon capitaine must have changed his mind," said old Pierre at the inn. And he gazed toward a ship, stranded on the sands of the harbor.

CASE OF STINGY HUSBAND

How One Head of a Family Superintended Expenditures for Household Needs.

In a lively article in the current number of Farm and Fireside, on the relations between husbands and wives on the subject of home finances, there are several interesting reports of actual cases. Following is a report of a stingy husband:

"A girl I knew in my youth was married after a short acquaintance to a scholarly professional man. He had been brought up under hard conditions in a strenuous school of poverty. She was the daughter of wealth and had never been denied a reasonable wish. Her husband was what is called a good provider. He bought amply for the table, and was not averse to having plenty of fuel and sufficient house-furnishings to keep his home comfortable and dignified. He simply declined to let Betty buy so much as five cents' worth of anything. He did not wish her to have accounts at shops, nor did she desire them. When she wanted to buy anything for herself or the children, he accompanied her, superintended her purchases, examined every pair of stockings and every yard of muslin, and frowned upon ruching and trimmings as needless, drawing out his well-filled pocket-book and paying the bill with a flourish when the shopping had been done to his satisfaction. She never had any money in her possession except when her mother sent it to her as a gift, and when this was done, she took excellent care to keep Reuben in ignorance. Once the good man, for in some ways he was good, was compelled to leave home for a few days. He carefully counted the amount that his wife would spend for the house during his absence. Then he lost his train and had to wait over another day. Coming home, he asked her for the cash and put it back in his own pocket for the next 24 hours."

Cheerful For Him.

Not long ago a stock of crockery was sold at auction, and Mrs. Wilson attended the sale. When she returned her face was radiant with joy.

"You must join the cremation society," were the first words she said to her husband.

Mr. W. What for?

Mrs. W. I bought such a lovely vase to hold flowers—You have seen how it looks off the mantelpiece.

He Gave Hint.

Before the hint must have been jokin'—she was about me and told her husband that she was out to call on him every time she saw him.

There came a Judge.

COPPERPLATE ENGRAVING.

The Art Was Discovered Through the Merest Accident.

Every one has noticed on his visiting card the extremely delicate lines of his name, and almost every one knows that they are produced by printing from an engraved copperplate. Like many other things of use and beauty, this art of copperplate engraving was discovered through the merest accident by the goldsmiths of Florence in the fifteenth century.

It is a historical fact, however, that one day an engraver on gold, wishing to take a proof of his work, made the usual sulphur cast and then filled up the lines with lampblack, thus enabling him to see exactly how his work looked. While occupied in doing this it occurred to him that possibly the same results could be obtained by filling up the original engraving with lampblack instead of making an impression of it and filling up that. Struck with the idea, he put it into practical use and, with a little damp paper, succeeded in getting a fair impression from the engraving.

The discovery was communicated to other workers in the art, and they hailed it with joy, as it saved all the arduous trouble of making sulphur casts, but they never saw the full value of the discovery, and consequently the art of plate engraving lay for almost a century before its true import was discovered and brought out in all its great and beautiful results.

Today collectors of plate engravings rave over the crude results of earlier times and search the world for examples of these early masters to add to their collections. Many of these collections have been presented to museums, where they may be seen and appreciated by the people.

Apparently George Washington was not only the Father of His Country, but also something like the godfather of aviation in America. At any rate, he wrote a letter for one M. "George Washington, president of the United States of America. To all whom these presents shall come.

"The bearer hereof, Mr. Blanchard, a citizen of France, proposing to ascend in a balloon from the city of Philadelphia, at 10 o'clock a. m. this day, to pass in such direction and to descend in such place as circumstances may render most convenient—

A Soft Pedal on the Campaign

Governor Wilson's announced purpose to abandon all his campaign dates beyond those of the next two or three nights, until such time as ex-President Roosevelt shall be able to resume speaking, is wise recognition that the chord of sympathy in the nation has been touched and that the time is not propitious for the jangling notes of the stump. President Taft has made but few campaign speeches and has practically no dates for the future, but the spokesmen of his campaign in the West have been recalled, and there is an evident purpose on the part of all save a few discordant shriekers to soften the strident argument of the campaign, if not to silence it altogether, so long as the ex-President is confined to his bed of pain. No hardship is imposed on the nation by this decision, which seems to be concurred in by the newspapers and by other voices of public opinion. The arguments are all in, the vocabulary of contradiction, and accusation and unbecoming personalities has been overworked and it is full time that the curtain were run down. The voting will not take place under the influence of the impulsive sympathy of the moment, but it may be that under the shadow of this near tragedy, the voter may be better able to approach his duty of election day with less rancor of personal attack in his mind and a corresponding increase of ability to pass judgment on the real issues of governmental policy which are to be determined by this election.—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

The Control of the Senate

Hardly second in importance to the election of President is the election of Legislatures which will determine the political complexion of the Senate after March next. Two years ago the Democrats gained nine seats; they need to gain less than that now to hold control in both branches of Congress. The Democrats and Progressives now hold a majority in the Senate, and with fairly good luck they should be able after March to control the Senate without Progressive aid, which is very uncertain and usually fails when it might be useful to the country. If we count the Progressives as Republicans, which they generally are when Democratic issues are involved, there are 51 Republicans and 45 Democrats in the Senate, with two vacancies. One of these is due to the death of Mr. Hughes, of Colorado, and the other to the unseating of Mr. Lorimer, of Illinois. The terms of 31 Senators expire next March, and of these 18 are Democrats and 13 are Republicans. The Democrats are pretty certain of retaining every seat now held by them except that of Mr. Gardiner, of Maine, who will be replaced by a Republican; but Mr. Sanders, of Tennessee, a Republican, will be replaced by a Democrat. If the Democrats can gain six seats they will have 49 members, or a bare majority of a full Senate. The question is whether they can elect the successors of six of the 18 Republicans whose terms are presently to expire. It should not be difficult to accomplish this. If they elect Governor Wilson there is no doubt that they will control enough Legislatures to gain more than six seats. It is by no means out of the question that they should gain six seats even if they not carry the national election, but it is hardly worth while to speculate on this contingency, their victory being so nearly assured. Democratic prospects are bright for the election of the successors of Mr. Briggs, of New Jersey, and Mr. Richardson, of Delaware. A Democratic Legislature in Colorado would elect two Senators. The Democrats of Massachusetts have hopes of electing the successor of Mr. Crane. It will be remembered that they had votes enough in Massachusetts two years ago to give Mr. Lodge several anxious weeks. There are reasonable grounds, too, for hope of Democratic Senators from Oregon and Wyoming. Here are 11 chances; and if the Democrats should win six of them they would have two more votes in the Senate than the Republicans and Progressives put together.—Philadelphia Record.

Wilson Cancels All Future Dates

Confirmation of the report that all of Governor Wilson's future dates, with the exception of those planned for the trip he is now engaged on, would be canceled because of the assault on Colonel Roosevelt was had at Democratic national headquarters in New York last Wednesday. In an official statement Acting Chairman McAdoo said: "Governor Wilson's statement that he will not make any further public campaigning speeches because of the injury to Colonel Roosevelt, of course, does not apply to the present trip. The engagements for the present week could not be canceled, but after that Governor Wilson will remain at home, with the exception that he will make an address already arranged for on the night of October 31 in Madison Square Garden, New York." Incidentally, the wounding of the Colonel has halted other speakers. Bede and Harlan, who were camping on the Colonel's trail, have been recalled. President Taft has not been on the stump at all. The impact of the bullet that stretched Colonel Roosevelt on a bed in Mercy Hospital, Chicago, has ended for this campaign, at least, the exchanging of personalities on the stump. Leaders of all political parties are agreed on this.

Bad News For Debtors

The right of an individual or a corporation to send "duns" through the mails in the form of postal cards was upheld in Baltimore last week by Judge Charles P. Orr, in the United States District Court. He granted an injunction ordering Postmaster W. H. Davis to deliver certain postal card bills sent out daily by the Allegany County Light Company. In its complaint the company set forth that the cards, designated as unmailed matter, have been returned by Postmaster Davis. Mr. Davis asserts that they come under the ruling of the Postoffice Department as "dunning cards." He says the cards have on them terms of a nature reflecting on the character of the person to whom they are addressed. He will appeal the case.

The petition states that the parties were married in Pocomoke City, Maryland, on the 14th day of May, 1899; that though the conduct of the plaintiff towards the defendant has been kind and above reproach, the defendant has refused to live with the plaintiff and without any just cause or reason has deserted and abandoned the plaintiff and that such abandonment has continued uninterrupted for at least three years and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that the parties have no children born to them from said marriage, that the plaintiff is a resident of the State of Maryland, and has been such resident ever since said marriage; that the defendant is now a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and is supposed to reside in the District of Columbia.

MONEY . . . . How to Save It

To earn money—to save it, is the problem of every supporting household.

A Savings Account is a wonderful incentive to the person on salary to live within one's means.

It is a constant reminder of the value of the dollar laid by, an invitation to prepare for future sickness or injury.

Besides, there is the 3 per cent interest which this bank pays on all savings accounts. The interest is compounded twice a year.

Many others have savings accounts here and are saving something every month. Isn't it worth trying in your case?

THIRD TERM QUACK PLANK

Fraudulent "Blanket Policy" Offered For Protection of Health and Life.

IN INTEREST OF FAKERS.

"Theodore Rex" Promises to Shield Them Against Discrimination by Educated Physicians.

The political tentacles of the third term candidate have been extended in every direction from which might be gathered voters irrespective of sex, race, color or previous condition, of all vocations, factions and trades into the Progressive fold. By specious promises cunningly adapted to each the colonel beckons them to follow with blinding approval whosoever his bellwether adjutants may lead in order that Theodore Rex may again sit in the White House.

Tempting bait is thrown to the working people in the minimum wage, to the Socialist in the enlargement of government ownerships, to the women in the furtherance of suffrage aspirations, to the farmer in blaspheinous terms of rural life, etc. Now he appeals to the quacks, those true and hitherto despised men of predatory wealth, offering them tenderest regard and freedom from prejudice "for or against." The following "blanket policy" is offered for protection of our most precious possessions—health and life:

"We favor the union of all the existing agencies for fundamental government dealing with the public health into a single national health service without discrimination against or for any one set of therapeutic methods, school of medicine or school of healing, with such additional powers as may be necessary to enable it to perform efficiently such duties in the protection of the public from preventable diseases as may be properly undertaken by the fundamental authorities, including the execution of existing laws regarding pure food, quarantine and cognate subjects, the promotion of appropriate action for the improvement of vital statistics, the extension of the registration area of such statistics and co-operation with the health activities of the various states and cities of the nation."

Thus would votes for Theodore Rex be multiplied.

Insults Educated Physicians.

This quack plank of the Progressive platform not only insults the intelligent voter, but wounds the educated physician, in that it places the latter in the same category with empirics of high and low degree, rubbers, sun curists, magnetic and other healers and all other pretenders who fatten upon the credulity of the helpless sick and their terrified relatives. The Sun has adverted to the outrageous violation of propriety and justice which characterizes the medical laws of several states in the Union, the last instance of which we deplored in the medical regulations of the canal zone and which the bull moose platform threatens to inflict upon all the states in the Union.

These legislative enactments require all persons who propose to become physicians not only to pursue a more or less thorough course of preparatory education, but also to be trained in all branches of medicine and, besides, to be subjected to a rigid examination by appointees of the state. All these serve to protect the public against ignorant pretenders and would be perfectly fair did not the very same enactments exempt the latter from the provisions applying to educated practitioners.

Favors For CORMORANTS.

Thus do our sagacious legislators stultify themselves in the interest of the cormorants to whom they grant special privileges, because, forsooth, they claim to "heal" without medicine! There is now no discrimination against "schools of medicine." Therefore the special protection demanded for them by the bull moose platform is gratuitous and intended only to entrap votes. The "healers" belong to no school. Now comes Theodore Rex and dignifies them by a special provision and, expressing a most tender regard for their sensibilities, promises to shield them against discrimination by educated physicians.

This platform would raise the quack and healer above the men who daily exemplify their personal and professional superiority by some unselfish devotion to the public weal. In his eagerness to placate the influential horde of empirics Mr. Roosevelt would have us oblivious of the fact that the educated physician is the only real altruist in the community. Instead of arousing the public conscience (T. R.'s favorite slogan) this self appointed reformer deepens the crying shame and thus exemplifies again that "under no circumstances" need he be bound by his prior professions.

President Taft has won the approval of the quacks and healers by his medical regulations of the canal zone; hence this Machiavellian policy. Future generations will substitute "Rooseveltian" for "Machiavellian." Politics makes strange bedfellows indeed. Be hold Taft and Roosevelt under the same blanket!—New York Sun.

FELINE WHISKERS.
Delicate Sensitive Hairs That Record the Slightest Touch.

We are apt to think that the cat's ability to see in the dark is due entirely to its eyes, but competent authority assures us that the feline's power in this respect is due almost as much to its "whiskers."

These delicate hairs that project from the muzzle of the cat family are wonderful mechanisms. Each one grows from a follicle, or gland, nerved to the utmost sensibility. Its slightest contact with any obstacle is instantly felt by the animal, though the hair itself may be tough and insensible. The exaggerated whiskers on the muzzle often project to such a distance that from point to point they indicate the exact width of the body of the beast.

Consider the lion stealing through the jungle at night in search of prey, when the least stir of a twig gives alarm. The lion's whiskers indicate, through the nicest nerves, any object that may be in his path. A touch stops him short before pushing through some close thicket where the rustling leaves and boughs would betray his presence.

Wherever his head may be thrust without a warning from the vibrissae there his body may pass noiselessly. It is the aid given him by his whiskers, in conjunction with the soft cushions of his feet, that enables him to proceed as silently as a snake.—Harper's Weekly

JEFFERSON'S BONES.

He Prized Them Highly Until Dr. Wistar Saw Them.

It is said that when Thomas Jefferson journeyed from Monticello to Philadelphia on his way to take the oath of office as vice president he carried a lot of bones in his baggage. The bones, alleged to be those of a mammoth had been found in Greenbrier county, Va., and sent to Monticello, where they were set up by Jefferson, who, it appears, entertained a somewhat exaggerated notion of his attainments in natural history and who stood sponsor for the bones as those of a "carnivorous clawed animal entirely unknown to science."

It was not until after Jefferson reached Philadelphia that he was undeceived, for at a glance the learned Dr. Wistar saw that they were the bones of the common sloth, several specimens of which he showed the Virginian. Jefferson, it is related, was greatly chagrined, especially as his discovery became known as Megalonyx jeffersonii.

It has been pointed out that indirectly no less a naturalist than the great Buffon may have been responsible for Jefferson's error. It was the Virginian's practice to send Buffon specimens and information, and with the subtle flattery of a courtier the French naturalist wrote:

"I should have consulted you, sir, before publishing my natural history, and then I should have been sure of the facts."—New York Sun.

Frick, Gould and Morgan Gave $100,000 Each—Corporations Gave 73 1/2 Per Cent of Entire Amount Received.

John D. Archbold's statement that the Standard Oil company contributed $100,000 to Mr. Roosevelt's campaign fund in 1904 was confirmed by George R. Sheldon, who succeeded Cornelius N. Bliss as treasurer of the Republican national committee.

Not only did the Standard Oil company give $100,000 to elect Mr. Roosevelt president, but J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. gave $100,000, H. C. Frick gave $100,000 and George Gould gave another $100,000. Mr. Sheldon testified that 73 1/2 per cent of Mr. Roosevelt's total campaign fund was contributed by corporations.

Naturally these people gave their money freely to the Roosevelt campaign fund.

Testifying that he had contributed $100,000 to the Roosevelt campaign fund in 1904 because he was "especially interested," Mr. J. P. Morgan added: "The only interest we had was in the welfare of the public."

Mr. Morgan emphasized his devotion to Mr. Roosevelt's political fortunes by the further statement that J. P. Morgan & Co.'s usual contribution to the public campaign funds was only $100,000; that he never heard of a donation by his firm to the Democratic that when Mr. Taft was a candidate in 1908 the sum subscribed was $300,000 and that this year neither he nor his banking house had subscribed a dollar.

How It Was All Done.

To grasp these pregnant facts we have only to recall a little modern history. In 1904 Mr. Roosevelt had his bureau of corporations in working order. Mr. Cortelyou, lately in control of it as secretary of commerce and labor, had been made chairman of the national Republican committee. He and Cornelius N. Bliss, treasurer, were collecting money. As George R. Sheldon, Mr. Bliss' successor, says, 73 1/2 per cent of the funds received came from the menaced corporations.

If we do not find in these disclosures a sufficient explanation of J. P. Morgan & Co.'s "special interest" in Mr. Roosevelt's election, it is possible that later events may reveal it.

Mr. Roosevelt never prosecuted J. P. Morgan & Co.'s steel trust. He emphatically stopped the proceedings instituted by others against J. P. Morgan & Co.'s harvester trust. When the panic of 1907 was at its height he turned the resources of the treasury over to J. P. Morgan & Co., who used them and made money and reputation by the process. He met Gary and Frick, representing J. P. Morgan & Co.'s steel trust, before breakfast one morning and licensed them, in violation of law, to absorb the Tennessee Coal and Iron company, thus giving J. P. Morgan & Co.'s steel trust a monopoly of high grade iron ore. He put Mr. Bacon, a partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., into the state department and the diplomatic service. He made Herbert Satterlee, J. P. Morgan's son-in-law, assistant secretary of the navy. In a letter to Attorney General Bonaparte he testified feelingly to the virtues of the "Morgan interests which have been so friendly to us." Never before was the "public welfare" so cheaply protected.

Extent of Morgan Interests.

The "Morgan interests" are not confined to J. P. Morgan & Co. by any means. The Morgan interests comprehend life insurance companies, banks and trust companies, railroads and manufacturing enterprises. If the parent house increased its regular Republican contribution in 1904 because of its "special interest" we may easily imagine that the policy was widely imitated by affiliated corporations and individuals. Perhaps in this almost unexampled favor by the Morgan interests we shall find an explanation of the Roosevelt administration's hostility to the Standard Oil interests, which have not always agreed with J. P. Morgan & Co. concerning "the welfare of the public."

It may be that the senate committee will be able to throw more light on this point, but it can hardly add anything to the scandal of the Morgan Roosevelt alliance. It was Mr. Roosevelt who opened up to J. P. Morgan & Co. the possibilities of government by big business. It was Mr. Roosevelt who persuaded J. P. Morgan & Co. to plunge deeply into politics. It was Mr. Roosevelt who, consulting "the public welfare," registered the decrees of J. P. Morgan & Co. in the White House.

Not until Mr. Roosevelt had lost control of the Republican machinery and the law providing for publicity of campaign contributions had gone into effect did J. P. Morgan & Co. disappear from the list of regular contributors to the colossal corruption funds of the Republican party. Are J. P. Morgan & Co. now operating politically under cover of their recent partner, George W. Perkins?—New York World.

SOMERSAULTS OF ROOSEVELT

William Jennings Bryan Analyzes Record of Third Term Candidate.

HIS SUDDEN CONVERSION.

No Message in Behalf of People's Cause In Seven and a Half Years T. R. Was President.

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

Solomon says that the borrower is servant unto the lender. If this applies to one who borrows ideas Mr. Roosevelt does not recognize the obligation, for he has not only borrowed from the Democratic party as few public men have borrowed from an opposing party, but he has shown himself strangely ungrateful for the ideas taken. Of course it will not be contended that an idea can be patented. It is the only thing, in fact, that is not subject to monopoly.

Even Mr. Perkins, with all his fondness for the trust, would not contend that a monopoly in ideas could be formed and made subject to regulation by a bureau appointed by the president. Mr. Roosevelt, however, has won his popularity by the advocacy of things previously advocated by the Democrats, and still he is all the while assailing the Democrats bitterly and has shown toward them a hostility that is hard to explain.

To show the extent of his borrowing, let me enumerate some of the things which he now advocates that were advocated by the Democrats at an earlier date.

Shall the People Rule?

Take his paramount issue of the present campaign—namely, the rule of the people. The platform adopted by the Democratic national convention at Denver four years ago contained the following:

"Shall the people rule? Is the overwhelming issue which manifests itself in all the questions now under discussion."

Here is the very phrase which he employs, and it is not only declared to be an issue, but the overwhelming issue. It was dwelt upon by the candidates and by other speakers during the campaign, so that Mr. Roosevelt, then president, may be assumed to have had notice of it. He not only refused to admit then that it was the paramount issue, but he displayed extraordinary activity in urging upon the country Mr. Taft, whom he has since declared to be the agent of bosses and the enemy of popular government.

It would seem that he ought to make some slight acknowledgment of his indebtedness to the Democratic party for suggesting this issue to him. At least, he might put the issue in quotation marks.

He is now advocating the direct election of senators, but if he ever expressed himself in favor of this reform earlier than two years ago the fact has escaped my observation, and I have not only watched carefully, but waited anxiously, for some favorable expression from him.

Long Fight For Popular Election of Senators.

The Democratic party began the fight for the popular election of senators twenty years ago this summer, when a Democratic house of representatives at Washington passed for the first time a resolution submitting the necessary amendment. Since that time a similar resolution has been passed by the house in five other congresses—first, in 1894 by another Democratic house; then after two congresses had elapsed, by three Republican houses, and last, by the present Democratic house. During the twenty years the reform has been endorsed in three Democratic platforms, the platforms of 1900, 1904 and 1908, and it has been endorsed by the legislatures of nearly two-thirds of the states. Mr. Roosevelt must have known of the effort which was being made by the people to secure the popular election of senators, and yet he took no part in the fight. During this time he was president for seven and one-half years, and it is quite certain that a ringing message from him would have brought victory to the people's cause, but no message came. Four years ago the convention which he controlled and which nominated Mr. Taft rejected, by a vote of seven to one, a resolution endorsing this reform. Still Mr. Roosevelt did not say anything. He neither rebuked the Republican convention nor endorsed the strong plank which was included in the Denver platform. Even Mr. Taft went so far during the campaign of 1908 as to say that PERSONALLY he was INCLINED to favor the popular election of senators by the people, but Mr. Roosevelt did not even indicate an intention in that direction. Now, when the reform is practically secured by amendment being before the states for ratification—he declares himself in favor of it. Would it not be fair to him to indicate in some way his appreciation of the long continued struggle by the Democrats in behalf of this reform before he espoused it?

T. R. and the Income Tax.

Mr. Roosevelt is in favor of an income tax. How long since? His endorsement of it was during his second term, and then it was suggested as a means of limiting swollen fortunes and not as a means of raising revenue. The Democratic party stated an income tax provision in the Wilson law of 1904. When this provision was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court by a majority of one the Democratic party renewed the fight and has contended for the income tax in three national campaigns. In 1908 the Democratic platform demanded the submission of an amendment specifically authorizing an income tax—the very amendment now before the states for ratification.

Mr. Roosevelt's candidate, Mr. Taft, declared during the campaign that an amendment was not necessary, and Mr. Roosevelt never made any argument in favor of the amendment or in favor of the principle embodied in it. The amendment has now been ratified by thirty-four states; but, so far as I know, Mr. Roosevelt has never made a speech in favor of its ratification nor, since the submission of the amendment, made a speech urging an income tax as a part of our fiscal system. It would not require any great stretch of generosity on his part to credit the Democratic party with priority in the advocacy of this reform.

Not Always For Railroad Regulation.

Mr. Roosevelt is now an advocate of railroad regulation. When did he become? The Democratic party in its platforms of 1896, 1900 and 1904 demanded an extension of the powers of the interstate commerce commission. Up to 1904 Mr. Roosevelt never discussed the subject of railroad regulation of factually or in public speech, so far as I have been able to find. Although nominated without opposition in the convention of 1904, his platform contained no promise of railroad regulation. By its attitude on the railroad question the Democratic party alienated the support of those railway officials who counted themselves Democrats, and Mr. Roosevelt, both in 1900, when he was a candidate for vice president, and in 1904, when he was a candidate for president, had the benefit of the support of those ex-Democrats. It was in 1904 that he wrote his famous letter to Mr. Harriman and in the state of New York profited by the campaign fund that Mr. Harriman raised.

When after 1904 Mr. Roosevelt took up the subject of railroad regulation he found more hearty support among the Democrats in the senate and house than among the Republicans, so that he has reason to know that the Democratic party has for a long time planted itself boldly upon the people's side on the subject of railroad regulation.

Under the circumstances we might expect some complimentary reference to our party's attitude instead of anathemas.

T. R.'s Complete Somersault.

On the subject of publicity as to campaign contributions he has not only adopted the Democratic position, but he has been compelled to turn a complete somersault in order to do so. In 1908 the Democratic platform demanded the publication before election of the names of individual contributors and the amounts contributed. Mr. Roosevelt at that time endorsed Mr. Taft's contention that the publication should be deferred until after the election, and even went so far as to give reasons for believing that it would be improper to make the publication before the election. Two years later he declared in favor of publicity before and after the election, landing on the Democratic side shortly before the law was enacted carrying out the Democratic platform on this subject. Here, surely, he ought to praise the Democratic party for the pioneer work it has done in purifying politics.

Here are a few of the things which bear the Democratic brand, and with all of his experience on the plains he will not be able to "work the brand over" so as to make it look like "T. R."

REPUBLICAN HOPE

RESTS IN WILSON.

Gov. Burke Declares For Democrat and Gives His Reasons.

By JOHN BURKE,

Governor of North Dakota.

The election of Governor Wilson is the only thing that can save the Republican party. Four years of President Taft has split it in two. We have no reason to believe that he will be any different or that his second administration, if he is re-elected, will be any more satisfactory to the people than his first. His re-election will mean the division of the Republican party into many warring factions, which can only result in final dissolution of all.

The end will come quicker and just as certain if Roosevelt is elected, for he is no longer a Republican, but is the leader of a new party, at war with the Republican party, as it is with the Democratic party. On the other hand, if Wilson is elected the Roosevelt party will perish; the Republicans will reorganize their party, purge it of the baneful influence of corporate power and greed and make it again the grand old party it was in the days of Lincoln.

Louis D. Brandeis performed a real public service when he quoted the records to show that George W. Perkins is and always has been an enemy of union labor.

Wonder if Emerson was gazing upon a moose calf when several decades ago he wrote:

I am the owner of the sphere,
Of the seven stars and the solar year.

A Chance for the Boys

One of the largest and best of our native fruits has never received the attention that it merits. This is the wild pawpaw (Asimina triloba) which is found along rivers and small streams in many sections of the eastern and central states. The fruits vary greatly in size and quality and are produced singly or in clusters on small bushes. The characteristic flavor of the fruit is not relished by some but many persons are very fond of the well ripened fruit. The State Experiment Station is attempting to improve the pawpaw by collecting seeds and plants of the best wild sorts. In order to enlist the co-operation of persons acquainted with desirable types the Horticultural Department has arranged with the State Horticultural Society to offer a prize of $3.00 for the largest and best specimen exhibited at the annual meeting at the Fifth Regiment Armory in Baltimore, November 18th to 23rd. A second prize of $2.00 will be given for the next best specimen. This offers an opportunity to any boy in the State to win a substantial premium and at the same time help in the improvement of a neglected fruit. Specimens should be securely packed together with the name and address of the sender and forwarded to W. R. Ballard, State Experiment Station, College Park, Maryland, or sent direct to the Armory in time for exhibit in care of Prof. T. B. Symons, Secretary of the Horticultural Society. Transportation charges will be refunded upon presentation of receipt.

Captain Taylor Assaulted

In a quarrel which called out Sheriff Tull and Deputy Townsend the first of last week at Blake's store, in the Quindocqua neighborhood, Capt. Washington Taylor, a white man, was badly cut up with a pair of brass knuckles by some one who attacked him in the dark. The trouble started over a bicycle belonging to a white boy which a colored boy took. The sheriff arrested Harry Spence, colored, as the culprit to await the action of the grand jury.

Governor Names Committee For Land Exhibit

Declaring himself in favor of a Maryland exhibit at the American Land and Irrigation Exposition to be held in New York from November 15 to December 2, Governor Goldsborough has written F. De Sales Mudd, superintendent of the State Bureau of Immigration, appointing a committee to undertake the gathering of products and supervising of the State's exhibit. The Governor writes:
"The one and only trouble confronting me is that no financial provision was made by the Legislature of 1912 to defray the expenses of an exhibit though realizing the vast benefit and profit that, in my judgment, would accrue to the State by being able, through the medium of this land show, to bring to the attention of thousands of people who will visit it the varied agricultural interests and resources centered in Maryland."
"You and a number of other gentlemen who are deeply interested in promoting agriculture within the State to aid financially in this matter, it will be possible by way of private subscriptions to raise a sum adequate to make a commendable display of Maryland's agricultural industries and resources at this exhibition, and of this I am exceedingly glad."
"Therefore, I have decided to name the following gentlemen as a commission to represent Maryland at this Land and Irrigation Show, viz: F. De Sales Mudd, Supt. State Bureau of Immigration; Dr. Richard S. Hill, director of farmers' institutes; Ex-Senator George T. C. Gray, of Charles county; J. W. Ranahan, of St. Mary's county; F. Mertens, of Allegany county; David Clark, of Baltimore city; Addison C. Thomas, of Baltimore city; George Blakiston, of Baltimore city; Harry P. Skipper, of Queen Anne's county; Irvin T. ### The Shooting of Roosevelt

The American people rejoice that Theodore Roosevelt was spared last night from the assassin. From papers found upon his assailant it would appear that the man is of unsound mind. None other, indeed, could be guilty of so heinous a crime. That his attempt was not successful is reason for universal gratification; for grief would have been worldwide had a bullet brought to so tragic a close the brilliant career of Theodore Roosevelt.

The assassin has no place in the American commonwealth. Neither statute nor sentiment sanctions the adjustment of a grievance with the pistol. The murderer receives short shrift, and the man whose disordered intellect impels him to attempt the life of an individual engaged in a work of public service, in the belief that he is promoting some common good, can expect no mercy from the law or outraged public opinion.

The assassination of President McKinley is still fresh in the public mind; and no less bitter would have been the nation's grief and no less keen the sense of loss had Roosevelt similarly followed the man who was once his chief. As it is, Roosevelt luck still holds good, and the people sincerely congratulate him on his fortunate escape while execrating the hand that was raised against him.—Baltimore American.

Smut in Wheat

Having called attention to the advantage of selecting seed wheat at this season, farmers must not overlook the possibility of smut which is so prevalent in some sections of Maryland.

In general the smut spores, which, as a rule, are attached to the grain when sown, germinate at the same time as the seed, the fungus entering the young plantlet in which it develops unseen until about the time the flowers or grain become filled with a mass of delicate threads which mature their spores for the infection of the next crop.

There are two classes; the stinking and loose smuts and the loss and deterioration from same is very considerable, but can be avoided by treating the seed wheat with a solution of formalin, particulars for same can be furnished by the State Experiment Station at College Park.

BECKER JURY SAYS GUILTY

Murder in the First Degree is the Verdict

Police Lieutenant Charles Becker, of New York City, was found guilty at 12.01 o'clock Friday morning of murder in the first degree for having inspired and instigated the murder in the early morning of July 16th, of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, who, on the day of his death, was to have revealed to District Attorney Whitman how Becker had been his "silent partner" in his forty-fifth street gambling house, in New York. The verdict was found just after 9 hours and 37 minutes of deliberation by the jury.

The verdict was doubly terrible to Becker, for up to the last moment he had confidently expected to be acquitted, counting the long delay of the jury as an augury in his favor.

His reception of the words which branded him the taker of human life and condemned him to listen on Wednesday of this week to Justice Goff's sentence—a sentence which even Becker cannot doubt will be death—revealed Becker as a stronger man than even the accusations of "Billiard Ball" Jack Rose, "Bridge" Webber, Harry Val-lon and "Sam" Scheppe had painted him, a stronger man than even he had shown himself to be in the 19 days of his trial. Mrs. Becker, sitting outside the door of the courtroom, fell in a swoon when the verdict was announced.

Hicks' Forecasts For November

A regular storm period is at its center on the 1st and reaching to the 5th. The Moon is in perigee on the 3d, and on the celestial equator on the 5th. The temperature will rise, the barometer will continue to fall, cloudiness will increase, and about the 3d, 4th and 5th, rain, wind and thunder storms will culminate during consecutive days, passing eastward to the Atlantic. Behind the storms the barometer will rise, winds will change to westward, with snow squalls and much cooler weather.

A reactionary storm period falling on the 6th, 7th and 8th, with new Moon on the 8th, threatening weather will continue over from the 5th, bringing a return of falling barometer, change to warmer and increasing storms of rain and wind on and touching the 8th and 9th. These storms will end in dashes of early snow, and change to very much colder, about the 9th, 10th and 11th.

A regular storm period involves the 11th to the 16th, being central on the 13th. The Mercury and Venus periods will both be felt in the disturbances of this period, and to the end of the month. Storms of this period will culminate on the 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th—first to the west and thence progressively, day by day, to the eastward.

A reactionary storm period falls on and touching the 18th, 19th and 20th. There will be electrical storms centering on and touching the 19th, the date of the Moon's crossing the celestial equator. A regular storm period involves the 22d to 28th.

To Inspect Potomac

Governor Goldsborough placed the State steamer Governor Thomas at the disposal of the party of bacteriologists and chemists who are to make an inspection of the waters of the Potomac river to determine if Washington sewage pollutes the stream and infects its oysters.

The party is composed of one bacteriologist and one chemist from both Maryland and Virginia and from the Federal Government. They left Washington, Thursday morning and will be at work for several days. After completing its inspection and tests, the party will make reports to the commission composed of representatives of Maryland, Virginia and the Government, which was appointed to examine into the statement that Potomac oysters were infected with typhoid and other germs.

Wedding Kept a Secret

The Rev. G. R. Neese, pastor of Kingswood Methodist Episcopal Church, Wilmington, Del., and Mrs. Neese were greatly surprised last week when their daughter, Bessie Orah Neese, informed them she had been married to Noble Jarrell, of Goldsboro, Md., last August. The ceremony was performed at Trainer, Pa., by the Rev. C. W. W. Bishop. Both bride and bridegroom are graduates of Goldie College. Jarrell is a son of Robert Jarrell, a packer and canner, of Goldsboro, Md.

Announcements of the young couple's marriage were received by Princess Anne friends last Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Neese are well-known in Somerset county. Mr. Neese having been pastor of the M. E. Church at Rock Creek some years ago.

THE WOMEN'S VOTES

May Elect President—Six Suffrage States Have 38 Members of Electoral College

In the general election next Tuesday women will vote in six states—California, Washington, Idaho, Colorado, Wyoming and Utah—a fact which campaign managers of the various parties have taken into consideration. While the Progressive party was the only one of the three leading political organizations the equal suffrage movement, the Re-to give its official stamp of approval to publican and Democratic leaders have shown their appreciation of the importance of that movement by enlisting the services of women workers with an eye to the result in the six states in which women have been granted the full rights of the franchise.

Those six states have a total representation in the Electoral College of 38 votes, divided as follows: California, 13; Colorado, 7; Idaho, 4; Utah, 4; Washington, 7; Wyoming, 3.

According to the last census, California has a total of 671,336 women eligible to vote. For the other five states the figures are as follows: Colorado, 213,425; Utah, 85,729; Washington, 277,727; Idaho, 69,813; Wyoming, 28,840.

That the choice of a president and vice-president of the United States in the coming election may depend upon the votes of the women in the six states named is easily within the range of possibilities. To prove the truth of this statement it is but necessary to cite the fact that six presidents of the United States were elected by a smaller number of votes than those which woman suffrage states will control in the next Electoral College.

Statistics show that Presidents Adams, Jefferson, John Quincy Adams, Taylor, Hayes and Cleveland were elected by a majority of 37 votes or less. In 1796 John Adams defeated Thomas Jefferson by two votes. In 1800 Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr each received 73 votes. The choice then devolved upon the House of Representatives, with the result that Jefferson was elected.

In 1824 none of the candidates for president received enough electoral votes to elect, and the choice again devolved upon the House of Representatives, when John Quincy Adams was chosen. In 1840 Zachary Taylor defeated Lewis Cass by just 36 votes. In 1876 Rutherford B. Hayes defeated Samuel J. Tilden by one vote, and in 1884 Grover Cleveland defeated James G. Blaine by 37 votes.

Delaware to Turn Over

Delaware never has been so stirred politically as it is now in the closing days of the campaign. For weeks the candidates of the Democratic party have been touring the State in automobiles, holding meetings in large towns, small villages and country cross-roads, and even stopping at the residences of citizens, largely without regard to their political affiliations, urging them to support the Democratic ticket. The State from top to bottom has been covered by great mass-meetings, where the most prominent and the most famous Democrats in the United States have spoken. Governor Wilson's trip through the State was a triumphal procession, and last Wednesday William Jennings Bryan, a great favorite in the State, spoke in all three counties, winding up his tour with a tremendous mass-meeting at Wilmington.

Delaware is certain to give its electoral vote to Governor Wilson. The fight now is as to the State and legislative tickets. Governor Wilson in his great speeches throughout the State declared his great interest in the State to be the election of State Senator Monaghan, Democratic candidate for Governor; the election of the Democratic Congressman and of the members of the Legislature who would vote to send a Democratic United States Senator to Washington in place of Senator Richardson, the retiring Republican. Conditions all seem to point to the complete overthrow of the Republican gang which has controlled the politics of the State for years.

Musical Entertainment

A musical entertainment will be given in Grace Guild Hall, Mt. Vernon, (near Mt. Vernon wharf) Friday evening, November 8th, beginning at 8 o'clock. The musical program will be under the direction of J. T. Hopkins and daughter, of Salisbury. A special feature of the evening will be Miss Julia Scheideker, Soloist, and Professor Max Scheideker, Violinist, from a noted Conservatory in New York. There will also be a short sketch in two acts, entitled, "Dr. Cure-All," by home talent also recitations and tableaux.

MARYLAND WEEK SOON

Promoters Expect Exhibits To Prove Successful

Plans for the Maryland Week exposition, to be held next month at the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore, have advanced so far that its promoters expect gratifying success.

The week will open November 18th and will continue four days and five nights. Its principal features will be an elaborate fruit and flower exhibition, to be given under the direction of the Maryland Fruit Growers' Association and the Florists' Club of Baltimore.

As the purpose is to awaken interest in the horticultural and floral possibilities of the State, the display is expected to be the best ever made there. To insure an intimate knowledge of the fruits of the State, 25 baskets of apples will be given away each night. In addition, the motion pictures of Baltimore life and industries which the Advertising Club took to Dallas, Texas, and displayed to such advantage last summer will be shown.

Former Governor Warfield will preside on the opening night, and will introduce Governor Goldsborough and Mayor Preston as the principal speakers. On Wednesday night the Harmonie Singing Society will be the attraction and on the following night the Arion Society. Friday night will be given to the Boy Scouts, several hundred of whom will engage in contests and life-saving demonstrations.

As Baltimore has made no appropriation for Maryland Week this year, the expense will have to be met by an admission charge of 25 cents. Promoters of the undertaking hope that the contribution of the city will be in the shape of an increased attendance, as in that way only can the expense be met.

Why Waste Your Vote?

Every vote for Woodrow Wilson is a vote for progressive government. Every Progressive vote against Woodrow Wilson is a vote thrown away, or worse than thrown away.

Why waste your vote? Mr. Roosevelt cannot be elected. As between him and Mr. Taft, the contest is merely a question of which will run third. This may be interesting, but it is not important to the welfare of the American people. Even if Mr. Roosevelt could by any possible chance be elected, his victory would result only in a deadlocked Government. He would have a hostile Congress to deal with, which would not work with him. His election would mean merely four years of turmoil without profit to the country.

Governor Wilson can be elected and he will be elected. But this is not enough. He should be elected by a majority so great that there can be no mistake as to the meaning of the people's mandate. He will go into office with a Democratic House, and if his majority is large enough he will have a Democratic Senate as well. This will make President Wilson the leader of a united party in full control of both branches of Congress and in a position to carry out all the progressive policies to which it is pledged.

The country will have immediate revision of the tariff to reduce the cost of living, with as little disturbance to legitimate business as possible. It will have an honest enforcement of the law against predatory trusts and monopolies.

It will have a free Government emancipated from boss rule and from corruption rule. It will have a sane, progressive administration of public affairs from the day of Woodrow Wilson's inauguration.

That is what the great mass of the American people want, whether they call themselves Democrats or Republicans or Progressives. That is what they will get if they act intelligently. The way to get it is to give Governor Wilson a majority so overwhelming that it will be, indeed, the voice of the people.

Why waste your vote?—New York World.

Dredgers Take Notice

There has been a change in the license law for Somerset county by an act of the Legislature of 1912. The Act reads as follows, Chapter 804, folio 1569:

"Where any license is issued by the authority of any county, the Clerk of the Circuit Court for the county shall receive for such license from the applicant, one dollar and ninety cents for every gross ton the boat may measure, except boats of less than five tons gross measurement, when the license shall be eight dollars for each of said boats, and the captains or masters shall always have such license on board their boats and shall exhibit same whenever demanded by any duly authorized officer." The clerk's fee will be 50 cents as heretofore.

FORECAST OF ELECTION

Joshua W. Miles, Senator Smith and Blair Lee Expect a Great Figure

Democratic leaders last week were a unit in predicting that Governor Wilson's plurality in Maryland would break all records for the State.

United States Senator Smith and State Senator Blair Lee, usually accounted the conservative and progressive leaders within the party in this State, spoke in almost the same terms when questioned about party prospects, and Senator Smith, who was a Harmon man in the primaries, declared that every man in the regular organization would be at his post from now till the polls close.

United States Senator John Walter Smith predicted a majority for Governor Wilson over both Taft and Roosevelt and at that one of the largest ever given a candidate in Maryland. He said that under Wilson's leadership Democracy is destined to enter upon the enjoyment of a period of power that will rival that of its early glory.

"Our party in Maryland is united as it has never been in many years. There is not a sulker in counties or city. Whatever family differences we may have had in past years are submerged in the enthusiasm of victory and Wilson."

Senator Blair Lee, who was the foremost figure in the primary fight for Wilson in Maryland, is equally assured of a staggering majority over all.

"I base my opinion on what I have seen and heard in the last few days' campaigning. The intelligent people of Maryland are satisfied with Wilson in full measure, pressed down and running over. I have never seen anything like it. From top to bottom the feeling prevails that Wilson can be trusted absolutely to bring the country's government into adjustment with the changed economic conditions and can be trusted to do things in a sane and reasonable way."

"The tariff is the great question. The Republicans may talk all they please about 'destruction' and that sort of thing, but the hard-headed American knows something is wrong, and he knows that something is the high duties. He is going to change that and he is not willing to trust the changing to Taft, who failed them once."

"Neither is he ready to trust it to Roosevelt, who has boxed the compass upon the subject. He is willing to trust it to Wilson because Wilson has talked straight from the shoulder and told the people that the tariff is too high, must be lowered and must be lowered gradually, so that the economic conditions of the country can be kept in harmony with the reform."

Gen. Murray Vandiver, chairman of the State Central Committee, and Daniel J. Loden, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, said the party organizations were right down to work and that victory is assured.

"There is not the slightest trouble anywhere," said General Vandiver. "It is only a question of majority. Everybody in the party is at work, and there is not the slightest dissension anywhere that I have been able to find. Wilson will beat Taft and Roosevelt to a finish and will roll up a handsome majority over the pair of them."

Former Congressman Joshua W. Miles, chairman of the Wilson auxiliary committee, agreed with Mr. Smith and Mr. Lee about general conditions and said the apathy due to overconfidence is being dissipated rapidly.

"In my opinion, there is not now much apathy due to overconfidence," he said, "and it is largely because of the fact that as the campaign has progressed the people have deeply realized that this is more than a party fight; that it is a patriotic movement to put back in their hands the government that is theirs."

"My judgment is that one of the strongest indications is the Democratic registration in Baltimore city. That was voluntary to a great extent. Yet the party has a clear majority over Republicans, third-party men and 'declined' voters. That can mean only strong popular approval of the party at this time and of its nominee."

"Recent indications are that the Baltimore city organization is about to put forth every possible effort to poll the entire party vote. With that spirit and the sentiment for Wilson among the people the Governor is bound to carry the city by a majority, and if he does the counties will more than do their part."

"Another thing in favor of Governor Wilson is that in 16 years I have not known so many independents who propose voting the Democratic ticket. In Baltimore city there are over 120,000 'declined' voters, and all my information is that Wilson will get the far larger part of that."

Two Cross Marks For Ballot

Only one cross mark is necessary to vote for the eight electors of one party. It should be placed in the box opposite the names of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates whom the voter wants to support. It is not necessary to vote individually for the electors of that party. In the counties only two cross marks are necessary for a full ticket—one for President and Vice-President and the other for Congress.

HALLOWEEN IS NEAR

When Superstition Comes Into Its Own

As October 31st draws near most young folk begin to think of Halloween with its many possibilities for the weird and merriest of entertainments.

It has long been the custom to crack nuts, duck for apples in a tub of water and perform other harmless fireside reveries. Sometimes there are ceremonies of a more superstitious character, as, for example, charms to discover who will be the husband or wife of the person inquiring. It is said that if the girl inquiring does not find out who she is going to marry on Halloween she will have to wait another year before making this very important discovery. Mystic mirrors play an important part in the Halloween frolics.

There are many amusing ways in which a girl can find out her future husband's initial, name the strength of his affection, the age at which she will marry and how far distant that time is. If she wants to see the face of her future husband at the witching hour of midnight, she may take a lighted candle and a mirror and walk upstairs back ward, counting the strands of her hair as she goes. At the top of the stairs she must peer into a mirror, and over her left shoulder will appear the face of her fate. If a favored young man is clever, with a little ingenuity, aided by rear stairs or concealment in the dark of the hall, he may help to realize fate by a reflection in the mirror.

An old fashioned way of discovering the initials of the person each contestant is to marry, is to pare the apple in one long, curlicue (if it breaks, it means spinster or bachelorhood), and throw it over the left shoulder. It should fall in the form of a letter "the" letter. Another method is where three bowls placed on the table, one filled with clear water, one with muddy water, and one left empty. Advancing blindfolded, those who are in doubt as to their destiny should strive to place their finger in one of these. If it encounters, perchance the first mentioned bowl, the future life partner will be a girl or a young man; if the second a widower; the empty bowl denotes single blessedness. Four bowls may be taken and all filled except one, the first of these should contain clear water, the second rose-colored water, and the third, water that has been colored blue. The blindfolded person tries again. If he puts his finger into the clear water, he will marry between the ages of 20 and 30; if in the rose-colored water, between the ages of 30 and 40; if in the blue, between 40 and 50. If, however, his choice falls on the empty dish, no wife for him.

Before each young woman retires on Halloween night, she should place her shoes at right angles and say:

"Hoping this night my true love to see, I place my shoes in the form of a T."

Mr. Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill

Theodore Roosevelt and his party arrived at the Pennsylvania Railroad Station in New York from Chicago at 8.08 last Tuesday morning. The ex-President was eating his breakfast when the train pulled into the station. His breakfast consisted of eggs, bacon, tea and bread and butter. There was no demonstration in the station. In fact, all persons were barred from the train shed, except members of the family. Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson and George E. Roosevelt joined the party. Mr. Roosevelt's special car and the car of the physicians and newspaper men were quickly detached and started for Oyster Bay. Drs. Lambert and Terrell said Mr. Roosevelt's wound was oozing some, but that he was in excellent condition.

The ex-President and his party arrived at Syosset from New York City at 9.30 o'clock the same morning. This place is four miles south of Oyster Bay, and the train was routed thither in order to avoid any crowd. Only a handful of persons were on hand when the ex-President stepped from his car and walked unassisted to a waiting automobile. He was driven immediately to Sagamore Hill. "I'm feeling just fine," said Mr. Roosevelt as he waved his hat to the small crowd.

When he arrived at Sagamore Hill Mr. Roosevelt's wound was dressed and he went to bed immediately, with instructions to remain quiet all day. The physicians said the wound showed no ill-effects from the trip.

EXHIBITS ARE SHOWN FROM MANY CLIMES

Great Missionary Exposition Is Soon to Open in Baltimore—Native Life of Distant Places To Be Pictured.

"The World in Baltimore" will be the third Missionary exposition on a world-wide scale to be held in the United States. From October 25 to November 30, 1912, it will occupy the Lyric Theatre and a specially constructed hall in Baltimore.

Education and inspiration are the objects of the exposition. It has been organized and is under the management of committees of Baltimore men of the highest standing and reputation, who have provided a guarantee fund of more than $50,000 to finance the exposition.

PAGODA IN CHINA, "THE WORLD IN BALTIMORE"

nance the exposition. It is hoped that the admission fee, which the visitor will be asked to pay, will enable all expenses to be met, and any money advanced by the guarantors to be repaid. Should a profit remain after this has been done, it will be turned over to the Missionary Education Movement for the extension of missionary education. The great missionary boards and societies are supporting the exposition through the Missionary Education Movement.

The exposition will demonstrate to the eye, by providing beautiful, artistic things to see, the scenery of all lands where the work of Christian missions is being carried on, the life of the people of these lands, their native religions and their needs from both a humanitarian and religious point of view.

Life-like scenery will surround each scene and section, enclosing groups of buildings copied from the characteristic town or village structure of each land. The first sensation of visitors will be the recognition that before their eyes is a feast of color and a spectacle such as rarely meets the gaze of the untraveled American. In one part of the hall, to be called the "Hall of Nations," will be located the sections devoted to foreign nations. As the visitor enters, before him will be a Japanese scene of peculiar beauty. From the beautiful temple garden of Japan you can step into a walled Chinese city and then walk through a Korean village street. Only a little imagination is needed to make you feel you are traveling in the Orient. The Japanese scene will be dominated by a Buddhist temple with the Torii arch before it. There will

SIXTY MISSIONARIES WILL PARTICIPATE

A large number of leading missionaries from all parts of the world are to be in Baltimore during "The World in Baltimore" Exposition, which will be held October 25 to November 30. They will take a prominent part in be little shops and rooms from Japanese houses.

The China scene will have its tall central Pagoda, its temple shrines and its native homes. In Korea there will be a farmhouse and other buildings, with a peculiar wayside shrine and a devil post. Then there will be an India village, made up of a Kali Temple and a Bengali Zehana, a bazaar of shops, the Towers of Silence and a Monkey Shrine. An African village will have its huts, native blacksmith shop, schoolhouse and granary. In the section devoted to Mohammedan lands, which visitors may enter through the Damascus gate, there will be a rich man's house, a Bethany home, a Turkish Khan and a Bedouin tent. Houses which you would see if you visited Arabia and Persia, with the kind of shops you would find in a Turkish city, will also be a part of this section of the exposition.

One part of the Exposition will be filled with sections and scenes representing Christian Missions in all parts of the United States. The visitors will first enter a large space where there will be represented the life of the American Indian and the Eskimo of Alaska and the results of Christian work among them. The scene will have all of the characteristics of a large encampment of Indians in the northwest. Another important department of Home Missions will be illustrated in the Frontier scene. Visitors will be surrounded by views of prairies and mountains.

One of the most interesting sections will be that devoted to work among immigrants at the Ellis Island Immigration Station, New York Harbor. Splendid results in the Philippines, and in Hawaii, Porto Rico and Cuba, of developing the religious life of the people, will also be illustrated in a most interesting way.

Populating all the scenes, both of the foreign lands and the home land, impersonating the natives of every country, interpreting to visitors the meaning of everything they may see, will be an army of 5,000 stewards from churches of Baltimore. These will be prepared to answer the questions of visitors by weeks of study from appropriate textbooks. Nearly all will wear the costume of the scene to which they are assigned, and they will serve in relays, so that at all times there will be a sufficient number on duty to give life, character and color to the exposition.

Log House, Frontier Scene, "The World in Baltimore."

and manners. Some have done valuable work in the exploration of countries where they have been stationed, while others, fulfilling ex-officio the duties of ambassadors, have given valuable assistance to the United States government and also to our citizens traveling abroad.

While in Baltimore they will be on duty at Exposition Hall, in the departments which are representative of the countries from which they come. Their duties will consist of giving information to visitors and instructing the stewards of the exposition in their work. Short addresses by the missionaries will be given daily upon interesting subjects bearing upon foreign life and conditions of which they are recognized authorities.

STRONG PLAYS TO BE FEATURE

"The Pilgrimage" and "Two Thousand Miles for a Book" at Baltimore.

"The Pilgrimage," an Arabian play, and "Two Thousand Miles for a Book," an American Indian drama, will be given in the Missionary Play Hall of "The World in Baltimore," to be held from October 25 to November 30, at the Lyric theatre, Baltimore. Both of these plays are unusual, demanding many participants, the requirement of people for both being three hundred and fifty.

Beautiful incidental music will accompany these plays, the weird strains of Indian lyrics being heard in one, and mystical Oriental strains supporting the other.

The scene of "The Pilgrimage" is laid at Jiddah, the port of Mecca, at the time when the whole Moslem World makes its annual pilgrimage to the tomb of Mohammed. The populace becomes aroused over the conversion to Christianity of several natives, especially that of a young Mohammedan student of high caste, which is the work of Missionaries who have been working in Jiddah. Several perilous situations are encountered through the attitude of the natives to the Missionaries and their friends. The acknowledgment of a gradual conversion to Christianity is made by an high caste Professor of Mohammedanism, whose wife, a princess of high degree, finally joins him in sacrificing all dear to tradition among their native people, as well as their riches, for the sake of The Christ.

The wonderful longing for the "White Man's Book of Heaven," the Bible, is demonstrated in the play "Two Thousand Miles for a Book," when, in 1838 a delegation of American Indians went from the Oregon country to St. Louis for "The Book," long before promised by the white men who had passed their way.

Several short plays, lasting something less than an hour each, will also be given. In "Sun-Light or Candle-Light" the scene is laid in Japan; "Election Day" takes one to the moonshine district of our own country;

Torii and Temple, Japan Scene, "The World in Baltimore."

China is the scene of "School-Girl and Slave Girl"; "Kosiki" is located in Korea, and a fifth play has its scene in Africa. The best talent obtainable in Baltimore has been secured for these plays, which are short enough to be snappy and interesting, yet intensely dramatic. Motion pictures, the best collection it has been possible to secure, will be shown. These rare pictures for the most part have been taken by special representatives for missionary societies especially to illustrate conditions in foreign lands.

BALTIMOREANS FINANCE MISSIONARY EXHIBITION

"The World in Baltimore" Exposition, which will be opened in the Lyric theatre and a specially constructed hall, Baltimore, from October 25 to November 30, is under the management of committees of Baltimore men of the highest standing and reputation, who have provided a guarantee fund of more than $50,000 to finance the exposition. It is hoped that the admission fee, which the visitor will be asked to pay, will enable all expenses to be met, and any money advanced by the guarantors to be repaid. Should a profit remain after this has been done, it will be turned over to the Missionary Education Movement for the extension of missionary education. The great missionary boards and societies are supporting the exposition through the Missionary Education Movement.

SPECIAL BUILDING ERECTED

No public hall in Baltimore was large enough for the Exposition, "The World in Baltimore," to be held there October 25-November 30, so a special hall was built for the purpose. This hall will be the Hall of Nations; the Lyric theatre will be used for the pageant, plays, etc.

A RESTAURANT FOR USE OF THE VISITORS.

A well equipped restaurant under the management of one of the best caterers in Baltimore, where meals and refreshments may be obtained by visitors at fair prices, will be maintained at "The World in Baltimore" Exposition, October 25 to November 30, and it is expected that this feature will add no little to the pleasure of those who attend.

SPECIAL DAYS AT EXPOSITION

Large Number of Functions to Mark "World in Baltimore."

"The World in Baltimore" Missionary Exposition, to be held in Baltimore from October 25th to November 30th, will be marked by the observance of a large number of "special days," or days devoted to some town or organization or church or branch of work. Many excursions will be run to take people to Baltimore from adjacent territory, and of course special arrangements will be made to accommodate the visitors. Thus far the following days have been set:

October 25.—Opening Day.
October 30.—German Evangelical Day.
October 31.—Methodist Day.
November 4.—Masonic Day.
November 7.—Reformed Church.
November 12.—Presbyterian Day.
November 13.—Washington Day.
November 14.—Lutheran Day.
November 18.—Baptist Day.
November 19.—Episcopal Day.
Programs for these special days are being worked over with greatest care, and something distinctive is being provided for each one. Ambassador Bryce's address will be a feature of the Opening Day, when Gov. Gold-borough, and Bishops Cranston and Murray will also speak. Other days will be arranged for before the opening of the Exposition.

GORGEOUS NEW SCENERY.

Much of the scenery for "The World in Baltimore," to be given October 25 to November 30, has been newly painted for the Baltimore Exposition, and all the rest has been retouched. The work has been done by the best New York artists, and the result is a truly gorgeous setting for the great pageant.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE TO MAKE PRINCIPAL ADDRESS

An announcement of greatest interest is that Right Honorable James Bryce, the British Ambassador to the United States, has accepted the invitation to deliver the principal address at the opening function of the Missionary Exposition, "The World in Baltimore," the afternoon of October 25th, in the Lyric theatre. Among the other speakers for the day will be Bishop S. Earle Cranston, of the Methodist church; Bishop Murray, of the Episcopal Diocese of Maryland, and Governor Goldsborough.

WHY TAFT OR ROOSEVELT?

Prices of Food Products Have Soared Under Them, Yet They Promise Reductions.

According to the bulletin of the federal bureau of labor the average price of a dozen or more of the principal articles of food has increased 50 per cent in the last ten years.

The price of flour has increased 39 per cent, lard 53 per cent, steak 59 per cent, hams 61 per cent, cornmeal 63 per cent, rib roast 63 per cent, round steak 84 per cent, pork chops 86 per cent, bacon 96 per cent and Irish potatoes 111 per cent.

During these ten years of rising prices Roosevelt and Taft were at the head of the government. Both of them want to be at the head of the government again.

Does any sane man believe that if these men in ten years did nothing to retard the rise of prices which are oppressing the people they would do anything in four years? Rather, judging by the past, we should be paying approximately 25 per cent more than we do now, or 75 per cent more than we did ten years ago.

WHY NOT ELECT

WOODROW WILSON

Chicago Post, Influential Republican Paper, Asks Its Readers a Leading Question.

FRAUDS OF PRESENT REGIME.

Says the Tariff Has Been Too High for a Generation and Must Be Lowered.

The Chicago Post, an influential independent Republican newspaper, propo-unds this question to Republicans:

"Why not Wilson?"

"This question is addressed particularly to Republicans.

"Governor Wilson suits the Democrats down to the ground, suits all

Democrats who are worthy to be called

Democrats. But in an emergency like this, why should not Wilson suit

a large part of the Republicans as well?"

"Why not Wilson?"

"Governor Wilson is a thoroughbred

American gentleman, not only in the accident of birth, but in his every ideal, impulse and principle. That should be the first requirement of every presidential candidate.

"Governor Wilson is a tried and trustworthy executive. His brilliant record as governor of New Jersey proves that.

"Governor Wilson is an eminently sane and sensible man. He is an eminently honorable man. He has dignified every place which he has held.

He has performed a splendid public service by lifting the present campaign out of the mire of mudslinging with which Roosevelt began it.

"In every personal characteristic,

Governor Wilson is equipped to be any man's president, without regard to whether that man is a Democrat or a Republican. What then, of his political qualifications?"

"Governor Wilson is and always has been a sensible Democrat, but he is not and never has been a silly, violent partisan.

"Governor Wilson stands for honesty and efficiency in federal administration. So do all save those who profit by graft and inefficiency.

"Governor Wilson stands for the curbing of trusts and monopolies. So do all, except monopolists and their defenders, Theodore Roosevelt.

"Governor Wilson stands for a prompt and steady downward revision of the tariff. So do nine-tenths of the people of the United States.

"Governor Wilson believes in a more radical tariff revision than do a large number of the rank and file of Republicans. But Governor Wilson is the only candidate who if elected will permit the revision of the tariff at all.

"The tariff has been too high for a generation. Is it not better to take a chance at getting it too low—according to Republican standards—than to let the known frauds of the present regime continue for another four years to rob the public?"

"Why not Wilson? He will give an honest, a dignified, a capable administration. He will respect the constitution. He will see that the tariff is revised downward. He will curb trusts

He will serve the people.

The Election Outlook And Its Importance

The great campaign, including that of the primaries, which has been going on for months past, is about to close and next Tuesday will tell the story. Every feature of the various platforms has been discussed. When the current week closes, there will be no reasonable excuse for anyone's being without full information of conditions and their proposed solution.

The Republican papers seem to think that the Democrats have been overdoing the tariff—which is the principal issue of the campaign—and their reason for so thinking is their fear of the great effect the Democratic spell-binders are producing on the people generally. The tariff, the trusts and the high cost of living are topics of vital interest to the rank and file of the people. It is important to them that there should be relief from the burdens, whether direct or indirect, that they have had to bear in order to support the great army of office holders made necessary by an expensive governmental system and to permit the great business trusts to thrive, with their menaces to competition and stimulation to high prices. There is a general awakening to these conditions and a general wish that some radical change shall be made in our government policy.

One of the chief results of the high tariff system is the growing expense of conducting the Federal government. As the receipts from the indirect tax become larger, the invitation to more offices and machinery to conduct the increasingly complicated work at Washington becomes also greater. What is needed is less complication, lower tariff rates and fewer government positions. People forget that they have to do the paying and that they do it as unwitting consumers. The past few months have done a great deal to open the people's eyes and to let them see to what ends under a prolonged Republican administration the country is speeding. They see no relief under that administration. Promises of relief have been made and broken. They are now ready to turn to the Democratic party in the firm belief that its promises of reform will be kept.

As to the outlook there is every reason to believe that Wilson and Marshall will be elected next Tuesday. Taken in connection with the general belief that something is wrong with the present administration, the serious division in the Republican party strengthens the chances of the Democracy. It will not do, however, to take any chances. There is still room and necessity for work. The Democracy to a man should perform its full duty. Over-confidence or disinterestedness may either be fatal. Each added encouragement as to the result should prove an additional spur to determined effort.

No doubt nearly every man has already made up his mind how he expects to vote next Tuesday. Still there may be those in doubt as to what is best. The appeal to such is to consider which is better, to continue a regime that means a hardship to the many and wealth to a few, or to side with the party whose plan of procedure is to effect the reverse. It is time for doubtful people to stop and consider. When it is recollected that a comparatively few men own the wealth of this country and that that wealth is in a substantial measure the result of the Republican administration's co-operation with trusts, the man of average means who has to work hard for his living ought to do some deep thinking before casting his lot with the Taft administration.

The Democratic party is the people's party and the election of Wilson and Marshall as president and vice-president of the United States and the Democratic candidates to sustain them in Congress, is a most important outlook for the people generally. We believe this result will be attained next Tuesday. We appeal to every Democrat and every other man who believes he is wronged by the policy of the present national administration to cast his vote for the party that always has championed the people's cause and that always will do so.

A Disguised Cost of Living

According to the computation of the "Wall Street Journal," the expenditure in this country for government, municipal, State and National, is more than three billion dollars annually, or an average of more than two hundred dollars a family. If it were possible to analyze the family budget and accurately to trace the tax levy, to determine what part of the rent money finally found its way into the government treasuries, what part of the clothing bills, the cost of feed, the trolley fares, etc., finally is used to pay taxes, we should learn, in all probability, that the expense of government is the greatest single item in the cost of living. There is little that we have, or little that we do, which does not in some way share the burden of maintaining the government in some of its forms. For the most part, the assessment comes by such an indirect route that it is not recognized and the individual never knows what amount of taxes he pays, but, in the final incidence, the assessment of the consumer for the greater part of the expense of government is not to be doubted.

Quite as significant is the statement that the cost of government in the United States has doubled within the past twenty years. The functions of government have very largely increased. Paternalism is on the increase in city, State and National administrations; responsibilities that previously were assumed by individuals have been transferred to the government. Vast organizations for purposes of government inspection and supervision have been created, often in duplicate and sometimes in triplicate, to guarantee to the individual protection against fraud which formerly his own good judgment and bargaining sense were relied on to detect and prevent. All this, and much more which the parental government does, may be necessary or at least beneficial, but it costs, and the burden of the cost finally rests upon the individual, who, if he were able to determine that cost accurately, might sometimes seriously consider whether he would not be better off if he relied more upon himself, and employed the government agency less to do his work. If the time ever comes when the policies of indirect taxation shall be abandoned in any considerable measure, and schemes of direct taxation be substituted, the expansion of the governmental function is likely to receive a sharp check, and "reforms" which involve the creation of official bureaus and salaried red tape clerks will be distinctly less popular. —Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Voting By Mail

The complete transformation of our election system as suggested by Charles Francis Adams in his plan for voting by mail, as outlined in a recent letter to the New York "Sun," does not seem necessary nor even desirable. Not only would it involve the postal organization in political matters to an undesirable extent, but it would lack many of the means which now exist—although inadequate in some respects—for the protection of the integrity of the ballot.

Voting by mail, as an auxiliary of the present polling system, for the service of those eligible to vote, but who, through illness or absence in travel, whether for business or pleasure, are unable to attend the polls in their home division or precinct, might be a practicable device. It should be possible to furnish to such persons upon application an official ballot and to permit them to send it by registered mail, duly signed and certified to the ballot clerk of their home precinct to be accepted and counted if received before the hour for the closing of the polls.

When we get to the point where we realize that true ballot reform lies in making the electoral function as simple as possible for the citizen who is actually fit to exercise it, and abandon the idea that universal suffrage is essential, despite the fact that the ballot is an impossible or irksome task for many voters, we may find a way to bring about such voting by mail. —Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

By HER GRANDMOTHER AND AUNT CLARA.

In Memoriam

In sad remembrance of Ethel Page Dashiell, who departed this life October 25th, 1908—four years ago.

Death has robbed us of our daughter, Whom we loved and cherished dear; It was Ethel, yes, dear Ethel; Can we help but shed a tear?

Yes, we miss her, oh, we miss her, When we see her vacant chair, But how sad the home without her, For there is no other there.

A beautiful life is ended, A dear one laid to rest; Safe in the arms of Jesus, Safe on His gentle breast.

By HER MOTHER, FATHER, SISTER AND BROTHERS.

LIGHT ON ANCIENT PANIC ARGUMENT

History Demolishes Republican Claim That Democrats Make Hard Times.

1893 WAS UNDER HIGH TARIFF

Every Panic Since the Civil War Has Been a Republican Panic—Lessons From 1907 Upheaval.

The enemies of Democracy are making their anticipated and regularly recurring howl—they are predicting hard times if Woodrow Wilson is elected president on a Democratic tariff revision platform.

The Republicans are claiming all credit for present prosperity. A glance backward will be worth while at this time.

Every panic since the civil war originated and developed under Republican rule.

The Republican campaign textbook of 1904 devoted much space to the many business disasters occurring from July, 1893, to November, 1894, intending the public to attribute them to the inauguration of President Cleveland in March, 1893. But the Republicans fail to refer to the fact that the Republican tariff law was in force during more than twelve of the sixteen months of greatest business disasters. This fact must be remembered—the McKinley tariff bill became a law Oct. 3, 1890, and the first indications of the 1893 panic were seen Nov. 11, 1890, scarcely more than thirty days after the McKinley law was passed, and the panic reached its worst stage in 1893 and early in 1894, during which time the McKinley law was in full force.

Millions Lost Their Jobs.

It may be recalled, too, that the panic of 1873 under Republican rule and in a period of twelve years of high tariff taxation, was most disastrous. It continued five years, 3,000,000 workmen were thrown out of employment and bankruptcy ran riot.

In 1890 the McKinley high tariff bill was passed, and there were 10,673 failures, followed by 12,394 in 1891. The tariff was raised to nearly 50 per cent, but wages stood still or declined while the cost of necessities advanced.

The most serious labor troubles in the history of the United States have occurred under Republican high tariffs.

Some Lessons From 1907.

The Republican panic of 1907 furnished another forceful refutation of the Republican claim that Democratic administration and hard times, lower tariffs and panics have been co-existing.

In 1907, in the midst of prosperity, thousands of leading banks, with hundreds of millions on deposit, suspended cash payments. The trouble began as a result of a struggle between great New York financial institutions for business.

The New York Post in October, 1907, said:

Condemn Themselves.

"The certain and significant thing is that it will be known as a Republican and high tariff panic. Protest as Republicans may, they will be held responsible. Out of their own mouths the Republican party and the Dingleys will stand condemned. They fixed in 1896 the standard by which they cannot escape being judged. In the party platform of that year they referred to the panic of 1893, and the hard times following, squarely to charge up the entire accountability to the party in control of the national government, and the political inference was stated with merciless logic:

"Every consideration of public safety and individual interest demands that the government be rescued from the hands of those who have shown themselves incapable of conducting it."

"Now, what are the Republicans going to do when the Democrats hand them back their poisoned chalice? * * * A great emergency has come and the high tariff is seen to be of no avail whatever. It was to keep us all rich and prosperous."

"Because the country has just got over the results of a Republican panic the president and his friends are urging us to perpetuate the Republican administration," says the Philadelphia Record.

Business Depression.

"As soon as business was checked five years ago the steel corporation, which was encouraged by Mr. Roosevelt to swallow the Tennessee concern, then its most formidable potential competitor, drew its fires and threw about half its workmen out of employment. Other industries did much the same thing. * * * There was an extensive stoppage of mills in Philadelphia.

"The Republican candidate for congress in the Kensington-Richmond district is using the 'soup houses of 1893' as a means of securing the wage earners from voting the Democratic ticket. Those soup houses existed under the McKinley tariff. But there have been more recent ones. After 1907 there were soup houses in the Kensington-Richmond district, and everybody who was charitably disposed was begged for contributions to feed the people who were out of employment."

A FACT ABOUT THE "BLUES"

What is known as the "Blues" is seldom occasioned by actual existing external conditions, but in the great majority of cases by a disordered LIVER.

THIS IS A FACT which may be demonstrated by trying a course of

Tutt's Pills

They control and regulate the LIVER. They bring hope and buoyancy to the mind. They bring health and elasticity to the body.

TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE.

Ways of the Papuans. The Papuans have no metals and no pottery. "The people at Parima have a small piece of iron about the size of a chisel, used for carving their canoes and paddles, for which the enormous price of three dogs had been paid, so they informed us, to the people of Wakatani," says A. F. R. Wollaston in his "Pygmies and Papuans." The Papuans dogs, by the way, never bark, "but they make up for this defect by their extraordinary power of howling," as if carried away by an ecstasy of sorrow. The Papuans carry their knives, the flint implements of prehistoric man, in a skillfully netted bag worked in a figure of eight stitch and use the sharp flakes not only for cutting purposes, but for scraping down the wood of their bows and for pointing and ornamenting their arrows. They carry about with them also a sleeping mat fabricated by a woman out of pandanus leaves, some tobacco, which they smoke in a cylinder of bamboo, and their apparatus for fire making—the split stick, the coiled rattan and the tinder.

Caught at Last.

To bring about the victory of good over evil has been assumed to be the especial aim of saints and sages, but savages, it seems, may sometimes be militant in the same cause. In his book, "The White Waterfall," Mr. James Francis Dwyer relates the story of a missionary who preached to a tribe of blacks in northern Queensland and told them in simple language of Adam and Eve and their expulsion from the Garden of Eden. The episode of the serpent much excited the converts, and when the missionary arrived at the blacks' camp on the following day the natives had collected half a hundred or more snakes, which they brought out for the good man's inspection.

"But why do you want me to examine them?" asked the parson, puzzled. The chief of the tribe winked knowingly.

"You tell 'em if old snake here that mak 'em plenty trouble, Mr. Adam," he said, grinning. "We think 'em you find out old feller with this lot."

Francis T. Brown, Main street, Princess Anne, Md., says: "I have the same high words of praise today as I did in 1907 when I publicly testified of the great good Doan's Kidney Pills brought me. You may continue the publication of my former statement. For five or six years I suffered from a severe ache across the small of my back and this was accompanied by soreness. I had rheumatic twinges and as my kidneys grew weaker the kidney secretions became too frequent in passage. Having read of Doan's Kidney Pills, I decided to try them. I procured a box and they did me a world of good."

FACTS WORTH REMEMBERING.

John D. Archbold, for the Standard Oil company, gave $100,000 to Roosevelt's campaign fund in 1904, but refused to "come across" with $150,000 more, which was demanded.

J. P. Morgan of the steel trust and other interests gave the Roosevelt fund in the same year $100,000, and did give up $50,000 more.

Mr. Roosevelt furiously prosecuted the Standard Oil company, but he refused to prosecute the harvester trust and the steel trust and gave the steel trust permission to absorb its only serious rival.

George W. Perkins of the steel and harvester trusts gave $48,000 of the New York Life Insurance company's money to Roosevelt's campaign fund, and refunded it when the fact became public.

ROOSEVELT BAIT FOR SUFFRAGISTS

Third Term Candidate Was Consistently Their Enemy Till He Needed Their Votes.

COULD HAVE CARRIED OHIO.

But Big Bull Moose Took to the Vermont Woods—Noted Woman Exposes His Change of Front.

BY IDA HUSTED HARPER.

The Progressive party had its first opportunity to show its loyalty to the woman suffrage plank in its platform when the vote was taken in Ohio on a new constitution. Forty-two amendments were on the ballot, and all were adopted except the one for woman suffrage.

Ohio is one of the "banner" Progressive states, and Mr. Roosevelt expects to secure its electoral vote. In order to do this a plurality of the electors must be Progressives, and they could therefore have easily carried the suffrage amendment if all the others had voted against it, as the vote on the constitution was very light, only a few hundred thousand out of more than a million who were eligible. Did he say to his followers: "Now, here is our first chance to show the women that we mean business. Of course if we win in November we will give the franchise to all in the United States but just now we can make good by giving it to those in Ohio, so let every Progressive vote for the woman suffrage amendment?" Did he do this? On the contrary, he completely ignored the matter, although he passed through Ohio the very day of the election.

A few days before, at St. Johnsbury, Vt., Mr. Roosevelt had delivered a part of his speech to showing how strongly he believed in the ballot for women and how anxious he was for them to get it. The question was not an issue there or likely to be, but it was a vital issue in Ohio, to be settled in four days, and yet not by spoken or written word did he show to the people of Ohio that he knew of its existence.

Two days after the Progressive party in Ohio permitted the defeat of this amendment its state convention met. If any women were elected delegates the press dispatches failed to mention it, and in the platform a woman suffrage plank was conspicuous by its absence. "The Progressive party pledges itself to the task of securing equal suffrage to men and women alike," says its national platform, and Ohio has just given the first example of the way it apparently means to keep that pledge.

In Mr. Roosevelt's second term the suffragists determined to make every possible effort to secure an endorsement from him. As Miss Susan B. Anthony's most eloquent letters to him received no answer, she went in person to see him in November, 1905, just four months before her death. With all her powers of persuasion she pleaded with him to recommend in his forthcoming message some recognition of woman's claim to a voice in the government. Laying her hand on his arm, she looked up into his face and said, "I beg of you to be the emancipator of woman as Lincoln was the emancipator of the slave." He was not resembling Lincoln so much in those days as he is at present, and he remained totally unmoved by her appeals.

Scant Courtesy at White House.

Shortly before he left the White House several officers of the National Suffrage association, realizing his great influence on public opinion, made one last effort to have him speak a favorable word. He came into the outside lobby of the executive office, required them to state their business before the crowd waiting to see him and would hardly give them a chance to speak but kept saying, "Go and get another sheet." He shrugged his shoulders and turned on his heel, and then they said, "If we will get up a petition of a million names will that influence you?" "No," he replied, "not one particle."

That was in 1905. The next year a letter from him was read at an anti-suffrage meeting in the Berkeley theater, New York, in which he said: "I am very tepid on woman suffrage."

The cause of woman's enfranchisement has no more implacable enemy than the Outlook, and Mr. Roosevelt is on the editorial staff. Last February he had in that magazine a ten column article entitled "Woman's Rights," but the only right considered was that of the suffrage. The article was such an excellent exposition of the attitude of women who do not wish to vote that the Anti-suffrage association ordered copies for distribution. In this article he said again, "In our western states where the suffrage has been granted to women I am unable to see that any great difference has been caused as compared with neighboring states."

And yet just four months after this publication, when Mr. Roosevelt had definitely decided to make the contest for the presidential nomination, all his scruples about forcing suffrage on a hostile and indifferent majority vanished in thin air because a million and a half already had votes and the color he wanted them, and he knew they wouldn't stand for any nonsense about a referendum.

Cole's Hot Blast Draft on top of the fire burns the coal from the top—burns the gas, which is wasted with all other stoves. The force of this down draft forces the heat to the base which is made of steel—cannot burn out—and heats the floor. Thousands of testimonials have been written regarding the base heating qualities of

The ideal heating stove is one which radiates all the heat thrown off from the fuel—into the rooms—instead of letting it go up the chimney. The durable heater is the one which will withstand the severe use, year after year, which a heating stove is necessarily subjected to. Sheet steel is the quickest radiator of heat and is used as radiating surface only in Cole's Hot Blast heater. Wherever the fuel comes in contact with the lining—only first quality gray cast iron is used. Cast iron withstands the wear of the heat from active combustion better than any other material, and the large, sensitive, sheet metal body and base radiate all the heat into the rooms. Burns Soft Coal, Slack, Lignite, Hard Coal, Wood and lighter fuel. Make your selection now.

FOUR QUARTERS OF EARTH ARE TO MEET

Pageant of Darkness and Light, at "The World in Baltimore," Will Surpass in Excellence All Those of the Past.

A great revival of interest in pageantry has sprung up in this country and abroad during the last few years. We have had historical pageants, many patriotic and semi-political pageants in various cities and towns; but none of these will approach either in operatic splendor or in unity of story the Pageant of Darkness and Light to be given at Lyric theatre in Baltimore from October 25 to November 30, in connection with "The World in Baltimore" Missionary Exhibition.

It is a more stirring or scenes, passed like a bewildering panorama before the spectators, while the orchestra plays snatches of Beethoven, Grieg and Baethoven. Instead, it was built around a set motive, and drew its scenes from incidents of missionary history. The excellent libretto by John Oxenham, although short, contains some lyrics of great rhythmic beauty.

The first scene is an Indian camp in the northwest. The chief of the tribe and his wife are in distress over the loss of their little daughter, who has strayed away. A band of Esquimaux come to trade with the Indians and the medicine men of the latter incite the braves to kill the visitors. Just then a missionary brings the chief's little daughter into camp and, having gained the chief's good will, preaches to the people his message of light.

The world has recently been shocked at the revelation of atrocities in the Congo region. The Central African exhibit at "The World in Baltimore," showing native industries, idols and idol-houses, and the home of missionaries and natives, will give Americans an intimate knowledge of the conditions under which these atrocities are practiced.

A striking feature of "The World in Baltimore" is the collection of idols. Tall totem poles from Alaska, little squatting men carved in Africa, weird and gorgeously bejeweled Burmese gods, the repulsive goddess Kail with her necklace of human skulls, all mix in happy democracy.

The scene shifts to Africa, at a spot where Livingstone, the famous missionary explorer, is resting from his journeyings. Here Stanley, who has been searching for him, finds him lost in thought and begs him to return to England, but Livingstone determines not to go until his work is done. At this news his men break into a song of thanksgiving.

From the forests of Africa, the scene changes to the streets of a city in India. A funeral procession is seen, leading a young widow to the funeral pyre. Just as the pyre is about to be lighted, however, an English official comes in with a proclamation against the barbarous custom of burning widows and the missionaries break into a jubilant chant.

The most dramatic scene of "The World in Baltimore" is the scene of a coral beach in Hawaii, where the natives are gathered for a wedding. In the background the volcano Kilauea towers. A priest of the goddess Pale approaches and demands that the bridegroom and a child playing in the flowers close by be thrown into the volcano as a sacrifice to the angry goddess. As he is about to lead them down, Queen Kapolani bids defiance to the goddess. She taunts Pale insultingly, but there is no answering wrath from the crater of fire, and the power of the goddess is broken forever.

The music for these episodes was written by Hamish MacCunn. It is naturally full of wild, foreign dances and dirges. There are gloomy Indian chants and bloodthirsty war songs; missionary choruses of jubilee and hymns of praise; fanatical invocations of medicine men and native priests; and many solos of every description.

The Indian goddess, Kail, to whom many temples have been erected in India, and who wears a necklace of human skulls, is one of the unique exhibits at "The World in Baltimore," October 25th to November 30th.

An old-fashioned prairie schooner will be shown at "The World in Baltimore," October 25 to November 30.

The hut of the tropical Indian of South America by some peculiar coincidence has the same form as the icy igloo of the Esquimo. Both will be shown at "The World in Baltimore."

Prayer in a Buddhist temple may be seen at "The World in Baltimore."

Cole's Original Hot Blast Heater

The cleanest, the easiest to care for. Users of coal must remember that the ordinary heater is a big care to operate. That its smoke and ashes entail dusting, curtain washing and carpet sweeping. Think then of the easy operation and the cleanliness of Cole's Hot Blast. This heater has a guaranteed smoke-proof feed door through which a current of air draws the smoke directly across the top of the stove to the stove pipe—away from the opening. Contrast this simple, cleanly feed with the side door in an ordinary heater. Side doors used on other stoves permit the escape of dirty smoke, unpleasant odors and accumulated soot drops from it. If you over-all a side door stove, coal falls to the floor. The air-tight feature embodying in Cole's Hot Blast Heater is an everlasting advantage in its favor. Allow us to show you this perfect heater before you buy. (2-17)

$550,000 Spent to Aid Wilson
Up to last Wednesday night it was estimated that the total Democratic national campaign fund is $632,900, of which $550,000 has been expended. Pledges of about $200,000 more have been made.

A rough estimate of the cost of keeping Governor Wilson and a large group of spellbinders going is $50,000. The leasing of New York headquarters alone foots up $15,000. The payroll at New York headquarters amounts to about $1,000 daily. That at Chicago will approximate $500 daily. Every 24 hours $300 worth of postage stamps is consumed.

The committee's telegraph service is understood to have already cost $12,000, while the telephone bill has reached $5,000.

Newspaper advertising has cost about $40,000 and "boiler-plate" matter for rural newspapers $50,000 more. Other items include $6,000 for moving pictures and $5,000 for cartoons.

From China came a contribution Wednesday. The Rev. Payton Stephens, an American missionary, sent $4; Arthur C. Taylor, $5, and Florence G. Taylor, $5. Their message read:

"We sincerely trust the first act of President Wilson will be the recognition of the Chinese republic."

Typhoon in Philippines

A terrible typhoon swept the island of Cebu, one of the Philippine group, recently. Many houses were blown down, and 2,000 persons made homeless. About 100 persons were killed, including three Americans. Six steamers were sunk, and a hospital wrecked.

Cebu is one of the larger islands, a little south of the center of the Philippine group. It is about 130 miles long and 30 wide. The population is about half a million.

Oliver J. Thomas vs. Addie M. Thomas.
No. 2769, Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity.

The object of this suit is to procure a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant.

The bill states that the parties were married in Pocomoke City, Maryland, on the 14th day of May, 1899; that though the conduct of the plaintiff towards the defendant has been kind and above reproach, the defendant has refused to live with the plaintiff and without any just cause or reason has deserted and abandoned the plaintiff and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years and is a permanent and final separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that the parties have no children born to them from said marriage, that the plaintiff is a resident of the State of Maryland, and has been such resident ever since said marriage; that the defendant is now a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and is supposed to reside in the District of Columbia.

It is thereupon this 12th day of October, 1912, ordered by the subscriber, Clerk of the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Somerset County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 11th day of November, 1912, to give notice to the said non-resident defendant, Addie M. Thomas, of the object and substance of this bill, warning her to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 26th day of November, 1912, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

An Elopement

It Didn't Come Off as Expected

By F. A. MITCHEL

I was starting one morning to attend to some affairs connected with my estate when at the door I met a telegraph messenger. He handed me the envelope and the book for signature at the same time, and I signed the one before looking at the other. The boy dashed away, and, tearing open the envelope, I read the telegram.

I need you very much. Do come to me. GWEN.

Not knowing any one by that name I began to do what I should have done in the first place—investigate. The address was "A. J. Courtney." My name is Alonzo Jackson Courtney. So far all right. I live at 107 Renwick street, and that was the address on the envelope, though there was no street number written on the message. The place from which it had been sent was Tipton, a city about an hour's ride from the one in which I lived.

My first impulse was to send the message to the telegraph office with the information that the operator had made a mistake in sending it to me. Then I felt to wondering who was Gwen and why she needed some other fellow with my name. Singular that the initials should be exactly the same in both! Was it, after all, a mistake? I thought hard for a few minutes, then remembered a girl by the name of Gwen I had met at a summer resort and with whom I had had a mild flirtation.

"I've a good mind to follow the thing up," I said to myself, and I did. I took the first train for Tipton, where, at the office from which the message had been sent, I learned the address of the sender. Going to the house, a very respectable residence on a good street, and being admitted, I sent up my card, telling the maid to take it to Miss Gwendolyn. Word came back that Miss Carrington was not able to see me at present, but hoped I would call again. The maid, however, handed me a sealed envelope containing an admission ticket to the opera, and on a bit of paper was written:

Box 6. This evening. Don't fail.

This was a trifle more than I had bargained for. I was quite up to facing a young lady in her own house and asking her why she had summoned me, but to accept a ticket to the opera under false pretenses was quite another matter. However, I was in for it, and to repay the obligation I dropped in at a florist's and sent Miss Carrington a box of flowers. This relieved my conscience. Then I returned home and during the afternoon put on evening dress, dined early and went back to Tipton, arriving at the opera house before the curtain rose.

I took a seat in the parquet where I could look up at box 6 and waited. During the overture a young lady, attended only by a maid, entered the box and, throwing off her wraps, took a seat where she was partly concealed by a curtain. I saw her long enough to assure me that I had never seen her before.

I tried hard during the first act to screw up my courage to visit her in her box, but failed. However, when the curtain fell for the first time I gathered sufficient nerve to face her. I would offer the best excuse I could for my action, giving her to understand that I had simply called on her to notify her that her telegram had reached the wrong person. I knocked at the box door and heard a musical voice bid me enter. The lady kept her seat as I did so, drawing the curtain a little farther forward.

"Mr. Courtney, I presume?" she said. "You could have knocked me down with a feather. I certainly had not counted on her not knowing the man to whom she had sent the telegram. I had got ready with my excuses, but they were not available. Instead of putting the lady right at once I stood stock still, not knowing what to say. So when she presumed that I was Mr. Courtney I bowed an assent, and, not caring to have an audience witness what might occur, I took a vacant chair behind the same curtain that screened Miss Carrington. Before I could gather my wits to speak she plunged into the subject that was on her mind.

"Maud has told me all," she said, "and has asked me to help her, saying she had notified you that she had placed the management of the whole affair in my hands. I therefore telegraphed you that I needed to confer with you or words to that effect. I preferred not to do so at the house, fearing some one would overhear of suspect and your and Maud's happiness might be wrecked."

"Pardon me?"

"I beg of you to let me go on. The plan I propose is rather complicated and I shall have to submit it to you in detail that you may understand it that there may be no link in the chain left out when it is put in operation."

"Do permit me to say something to you or I shall be placed in the dishonorable position of listening to secrets that I have no right to hear."

"What in the world do you mean?"

"A mistake has been made. I received your telegram, but was not sure it was or was not for me. The only

A Dutch New Guinea Delight. A strange food forms one of the articles of diet among the natives of Dutch New Guinea, of whom A. F. R. Wollaston writes in Cornhill as "The Most Primitive People."

The search for food furnishes occasionally some very curious scenes. One of the most remarkable occurs when the river in flood brings down a tree trunk in a suitable stage of decay. A canoe is sent out with men to secure it and tow it to the bank. When it has been left stranded by the falling water the people—men, women and children—come out and swarm around it like bees about a honey pot, and you wonder what they can be doing. When you go close you find that some are splitting up the log with their stone axes, and others are cutting up the fragments with sharpened shells in the same way that their ancestors—and perhaps ours, too—did centuries ago. The objects of their search are the large white larvae of a beetle, about the size of a man's thumb. I have seen natives eat them just as they cut them out of the wood, but usually they roast them in the fire and consider them a great delicacy.

Why He Balked.

A young and husky college man who was traveling on a steamer across the Atlantic was asked to box five rounds with an equally husky chap, who was a fellow passenger, as part of a series of athletic games which were to be held for the amusement of the passengers. Next day the young man came to the chairman of the sports committee and asked that his name be withdrawn. "What's the matter? Are you afraid?" said the chairman, somewhat piqued. "You bet your life I'm afraid," said the collegian. "That fellow you picked for my opponent sits at my table, and at dinner last night he leaned over to me and said, 'What's this thing 'demitasse' I see on the menu?' I knew right away that he was a 'rough guy' who had lived all his life in the open. If you want me to fight you've got to find a man that knows a demitasse when he sees it."

Princess Anne Citizens Gladly Testify and Confidently Recommend Doan's Kidney Pills.

It is testimony like the following that has placed Doan's Kidney Pills so far above competitors. When people right here at home raise their voice in praise there is no room left for doubt. Read the public statement of a Princess Anne citizen:

Francis T. Brown, Main street, Princess Anne, Md., says: "I have the same high words of praise today as I did in 1907 when I publicly testified of the great good Doan's Kidney Pills brought me. You may continue the publication of my former statement. For five or six years I suffered from a severe ache across the small of my back and this was accompanied by soreness. I had rheumatic twinges and as my kidneys grew weaker the kidney secretions became too frequent in passage. Having read of Doan's Kidney Pills, I decided to try them. I procured a box and they did me a world of good."

Neapolitan Dishes.

In the matter of curious dishes that Neapolitan favorite, the polyp, should be mentioned. The beautiful bay abounds with them, and the fishermen who make the little harbor of Santa Lucia their headquarters spend most of the day and night catching them. They are served whole and are not so repulsive as might be supposed, turning up in the "mixed fish fry" a nice golden brown. The Neapolitans have strong teeth and digestion. Polyps are tough, and I have always limited myself to the tentacles, which are crisp and tasty. They are usually accompanied by rings cut from the cuttlefish. These are tougher still, but what, with butterfly fish, gurnets, mullets and other unknown varieties, a tritto misto pesce at Naples is not to be despised.—London Standard.

Great Men Who Drank.

Cato was a hard drinker, while, in the language of one writer, old Ben Jonson was constantly "pickled." The poet Savage used to go on the hardest kinds of "tears," and Rogers observed after seeing his own statue, "It is the first time I have seen him stand straight for many years." Byron says of Porson, the great classical scholar, "I can never recollect him except as drunk or brutal and generally both." Keats was on a spree once that lasted six months. Horace, Plato, Aristophanes, Euripides, Aeneas, Socrates and Tasso of the old timers and Goethe, Schiller, Addison, Pitt, Fox, Blackstone, Fielding, Sterne and Steele were all hard drinkers at intervals.—London Standard.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

course that seemed to be open to me was to answer your summons in person and—

"Aren't you Arthur Courtney?"

"No, I am Alonzo Courtney, but if I can be of any assistance to an elopement—"

"My goodness gracious!" She pulled herself together and seemed to be thinking. Presently she said: "I wish you were not entirely unknown to me and the parties concerned."

"If I am to help you it may be better that I should be unknown to the others."

"That's a good idea. Our trouble will be that any one of our friends acting in the matter would be suspected at once."

"Suppose you begin by stating the case to me."

She thought for a moment then gave me the required statement. Her friend Maud Dempster was in love with the young man bearing my name. Her mother had arranged a match for her to suit herself rather than the daughter. Maud had very foolishly threatened to elope, and this had caused her mother to keep her virtually a prisoner. Now that she really intended getting away she regretted having put her mother on her guard.

"Does her mother know that she desires to marry this Mr. Courtney?"

"Certainly."

"Then it will be difficult for him to act directly in the matter. He will need an assistant."

Now, I took no interest whatever in Arthur Courtney or Miss Dempster, but I was delighted with the third party to the affair, who was for the moment my companion.

"Do please lay a plan," she said. "I have no inventive power whatever."

"Let me see. How would it do for me to secure an introduction to Miss Dempster and show her some attention, thus throwing her mother off her guard?"

"Better take care. Maud is very fascinating."

I smiled. This was just like a girl, but there was the least bit of awe away to it, which pleased me.

"I assure you," I said, "I am a have been, fancy free."

"What do you mean by 'have been'?"

"I would rather not explain."

How easy it is to say one thing and look another! She understood perfectly that the chance which had come over me dated from the moment I entered her box. Nevertheless she tolerated her by saying what she did and mean:

"Pardon me. I do not desire to trespass upon your private affairs."

"What do you think of my plans?"

"The very thing."

There was a flourish of trumpets and a rattle of drums on the part of the orchestra, and we listened to an act of the opera before resuming the matter on which we were supposed to be mutually interested. It was not till the end of the performance that we were enabled to resume the discussion of our conspiracy, and then there was no opportunity, since the opera having been finished the house was closed for every other purpose.

"I may see you home?" I asked.

"My maid is waiting."

"But you will grant me the favor?"

"Oh, certainly!"

Well, I called the next evening, and while we gave some time to laying a plan by which the elopement might be effected we reached no definite conclusion. I went away with a desire to plan my own elopement with Gwen.

When I parted with her she said she would see Maud the next day, have a conference with her and notify me of the result. Two days later I received a note asking me to call. I did so and learned that both Maud and the real Courtney were much pleased with the plan of using me to get the young lady out of her mother's clutches, but nothing definite was reached. One would suppose that this being the case there was no use sending for me. Since there was nothing to do in the matter we devoted ourselves to our own affairs rather than those of Maud and Arthur.

I made a number of visits for the purpose of laying a plan by which two lovers might be made happy, but somehow or other the plan didn't get perfected, or, rather, we found we couldn't bring the elopers to anything definite.

At one time Arthur would be ready and Maud would shrink from action. Then Maud would nerve herself to fight and Arthur would find that something stood in his way. A month passed during which Gwen and I held more than a dozen consultations upon the matter in question, neither admitting to the other that we were more interested in each other than in Maud and Arthur.

A second month of consultation followed the first, during which there was less said about our friend's affairs and more about our own. Occasionally I would ask Gwen if there was any news concerning the proposed elopement, and she would reply that the parties were waiting for something.

One evening when I called on Gwen I found that she had something on her mind.

"I expect you'll blame me awfully," she said.

"What for?"

"Not telling you something."

"What?"

"Why, Maud and Arthur have eloped."

"Eloped? When?"

"Why, three weeks ago."

"You don't mean it!"

There was a pause during which Gwen looked very guilty. I caught her in my arms and that was the end of the proposed elopement for us.

"Spanking" did not suggest chastisement originally. It was unknown to Johnson in this sense. To him a "spanker" meant "a person who takes long steps with agility." Rapid motion seems to be the root idea of the word "spank," which is not merely representative of the sound of the act as "slap" and "smack" are. The low German "paskern," or "spenken," to run and spring about quickly, is close to the original meaning; hence a "spanking pace," a "spanking breeze" and a "spanker," in the sense of an active and sturdy person.

Warm Floors and Healthy Children Make Happy Homes

There is no better way for you to avoid worry and expense than by insuring your children's health.

Warm floors in the home, which is the children's play house in winter, are assured when using Cole's Original Hot Blast Heater.

The steel base and body construction allows the heat to be radiated to the floor keeping it warm during the coldest weather.

Cole's Original Hot Blast Heater
The Cleanest—Easiest to Care For Burns Soft Coal, Lignite, Hard Coal, Crushed Coke, Wood and Cobs.

Users of coal must remember that the ordinary heater is a big care to operate. That its smoke and ashes entail dusting, curtain washing and carpet sweeping. Think then of the ease of operation and the cleanliness of Cole's Hot Blast.

Cole's Hot Blast has a guaranteed smoke-proof feed door—open the feed door and the current of air draws the smoke directly across the top of stove to the stove pipe—away from the opening. Contrast this simple, cleanly feed with the side door in an ordinary heater. The side door used on other stoves permits escape of dirty smoke, unpleasant gas and accumulated soot drops from it. If you overfill a side door stove, coal falls to the floor. And note this, you cannot make a side door heater air-tight—an everlasting advantage in favor of Cole's Hot Blast which is air-tight and guaranteed to remain so always.

Better select one today—surely it is the heater you need—

Sir Herbert Tree, the amount of whose correspondence is doubtless overwhelming, has been the recipient. It is said, of some extraordinary letters. From them three samples are selected for quotation, each from a member of the fair sex. The first runs: "Dear Sir Herbert—I don't know you, but I have four girls from Switzerland home for the holidays. It would be a great treat if they could see your play. But that would be rather expensive. Will you please send us five stalls? I hope you won't think this is very bare faced." The second lady wrote, "Although I am a stranger to you, it would be so helpful if you would send me £2 12s. 6d." The third lady asked for a couple of stalls and on being invited to say why she made the claim sent what she evidently thought to be an all sufficient reason. "My father," she wrote, "knew Charles Dickens!"

Ancient Tricks.

The arts of jugglery were, as has been proved by learned writers, of high antiquity. The Hippias, who lived near Rome, jumped through burning coals; women in early times were accustomed to walk over burning coals in Cappadocia, and the exhibition of balls and cups is often mentioned in the works of the ancients. It was as far back as the third century that one Firmus, or Firmus, who endeavored to make himself emperor in Egypt, suffered a smith to forge iron on an anvil placed on his breast, and rope dancers with balancing poles are mentioned by Petronius and others, while the various feats of horsemanship exhibited in our circuses passed in the nineteenth century, from Egypt to the Byzantine court and thence over all Europe.

"Journal" and "Journey."

Strictly speaking a "journal" should be a daily publication, although the word no longer has that limited use. The case of "journey" is exactly comparable. Even to Chaucer it still meant a day's progress, and in the fourteenth century it was possible to speak of one country as being "fifty two journeyes" distant from another. A "journey" being reckoned usually as twenty miles. But "journey" calls up no suggestion whatever of a day now.

In the matter of the tax sale of real estate in Tangier Election District of Somerset county, assessed to George Wright, made and reported by James E. Dashiell, collector of State and County taxes for the Second Collection District of Somerset county for the year 1907. James L. Bennett, purchaser, ex parte.

In the Circuit Court for Somerset County, No. 2778, Chancery.

Whereas a certain James E. Dashiell, collector of State and County taxes for the Second Collection District of Somerset county in the State of Maryland, for the year 1907, has reported to the Circuit Court for Somerset County, a sale made by him to James L. Bennett, of all that lot or parcel of land lying and being in Tangier Election District of said county, in the State of Maryland, containing three-quarters of an acre, more or less, with the improvements thereon, bounded on the south by the land of Hamilton Jones, on the north by road going between this land and the land of Chas. Price, conveyed to George O. Wright by Hamilton N. Jones and wife by deed dated August 10th, 1904, recorded among said land records in Liber O. T. B., No. 45, folio 491, etc., and assessed to George Wright on the assessment books of said Election district for the year 1907, and sold for the payment of taxes due and in arrears together with all the proceedings had in relation thereto; and whereas upon examination it appears to the said Court, that the said proceedings are regular, and that the provisions of the law in relation thereto have been complied with.

Now it is therefore ordered, by the Circuit Court for Somerset county, in Equity, this 24th day of October, in the year 1912, that notice be given by the publication of this order once a week for three successive weeks in the MARYLANDER and HERALD, a weekly newspaper published in Somerset county, before the 30th day of November next, warning all persons interested in the said real estate to be and appear in this Court on or before the 26th day of November next, to show cause, if any they have, why said sale should not be ratified and confirmed.

The report states the amount of sales to be $10.25.

Where Bryan Comes In
As indicated in yesterday's communication, from The Star's Washington Bureau, the belief in Washington political circles that Mr. Bryan has been offered the position of secretary of state in the cabinet of President-elect Wilson, and that he has accepted or will accept is very general. It is not surprising that the most distinguished place in the cabinet should be offered to Mr. Bryan. Such a proffer is not only in accord with the precedents in presidential politics, but the appointment would be a commendable one for a different and better reason, which is that Mr. Bryan would, there is every reason to believe, handle the important responsibilities of the foreign department with ability and discretion. The Star has not always commended Mr. Bryan's ideals and theories as they concern the conduct of home affairs, but has never questioned his political sincerity nor his ability to state his views with force and clearness. American diplomacy has in the past been accused of "artifice" methods, and very likely there would not be any frills on Mr. Bryan's way of putting this if he should become engaged in a controversy over any issue of importance which might arise between this and a foreign government. But he could be depended upon to uphold the dignity of the country, and if he should enlarge and extend our reputation for unconventional diplomacy perhaps the world situation would be none the worse for that.—Baltimore Evening Star of the 14th.

It was a very graceful speech which the President made to the Southern women. The valor and endurance shown on both sides during the civil war is now the common heritage of the children and grandchildren of the men who then fought. It is high time that the last trace of sectionalism disappeared, and when the Governor of Texas threatens to resign if a picture of Abraham Lincoln should be expunged from a schoolbook there is evidently no encouragement for the slight traces of it which may survive half a century. Mr. Taft has done his part in trying to obliterate the scars of 1865, but, as he says, his successor will be able to do more of that than he can. The Democratic party is completely national, while the Republican party remains exclusively a Northern party, and the recent election did not give much evidence of it in the North.—Philadelphia Record.

Latest Anarchist Crime
In the murder of Premier Canalejas of Spain the world has yet another instance of the outrages perpetrated by the anarchists in the name of freedom. The suicide of the man who perpetrated the crime has relieved the government of the costs and the trouble of his prosecution. But the death of such a person would not in any degree make amends for the loss of life of the head of the Spanish state. In fact, it would be well for society if all such outrages characterized as Zarate would make way with themselves. No problem of modern times is so pressing as that for the protection of the rulers and administrators of the nation from the bullets, the knives and the poison of the anarchists—the international outlaws.

The death of Canalejas will not have adverse effect upon the policies of his country and the political outcome will be nil. For while he was a man of great brilliance and ability and was actuated by the keenest sense of devotion to his country, fortunately for Spain the country is in a condition of placidity and there are no domestic upheavals to be fomented through the act of the assassin. Even the disposition to credit the killing of Canalejas to the execution a year and a half ago of Professor Ferrer, the Republican who was condemned for his writings, will not have the effect of fanning a popular expression in favor of an even keel. The world demands the restraint of the anarchists.—Baltimore American.

The Sleeping Car Tragedy
The shocking tragedy on a Pennsylvania train, in which a young woman waking from a dream under the impression that her mother was a burglar shot and killed her, is an unusual but not an unprecedented accident. Newspapers not infrequently print accounts of similar tragedies. The moral is easy to draw. The pistol-carrying habit is to blame for the happening. If there is any place where a woman does not need a revolver it is on a railroad train. What could persuade a woman in her right mind to sleep with a pistol under her pillow is a fallacy beyond comprehension.—Baltimore News.

Substitutes For Spellers
The State spelling contest in Missouri, which last year furnished the paragraphs of the country a fruitful topic for their wit and wisdom, is to be repeated this year, and the educational appropriation of the State will furnish money for suitable prizes. It is not to laugh, simply. If the spelling book has become a "best seller" in the Ozarks through the insistence of this competition, other sections of the United States may find it worth while to follow the example. Poor spelling is a national weakness, for which the proposed phonetic spelling is just a makeshift remedy. Unfortunately the spelling book is considered to have served its full purpose in the public school system in the few years of the elementary grades, and the educators, as well as the pupils, appear anxious to say a glad farewell to it and its guidance as soon as the classes have got by with a minimum of "fifty per cent." on its pages. In the later acquisitions to their vocabulary, the boys and girls are left to shift for themselves, and often in their struggle with newer and longer words, they forget the simpler forms of the language. The graduating class of a high school or of a business college, where deftness in fingering the typewriter keys and proficiency in pothooks has been acquired, often—perhaps in the majority of cases—would be "spelled down" by a class from the elementary schools.—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

An Oratorical Famine
We had but one misfortune in our remarkable election night experience in The Delaware State News office. All through the early part of the night we were honored and aided by the presence and counsel of Hon. William T. Parvis, of Milford. Besides his other accomplishments, Mr. Parvis is an orator. When he gets a good start, neither Bryan nor Beveridge has anything on him. Well it so happened that when the crowd brought the band to serenade us and play before our screen, we looked around for Will but he was not Handy. Nobody would have given more for him at that moment than the News staff, unless, perhaps, Hon. John M. Houston who had to fill the oratorical niche. We particularly deplore this incident as we have followed and applauded Mr. Parvis through several campaigns, only to see our lights rudely snuffed out on election night and succumb to the dark days followed. This time we see the sun arise gloriously with bands playing, flags flying and the machine which disgraced old Delaware turned turtle in our midst. Our kingdom would have been gladly spent for an orator; for our voice was gone. If such a thing ever occurs again, as a Democratic triumph like this, we propose to have in our conning tower not only Mr. Parvis, but Mr. Handy, Mr. Hazel, Mr. Monaghan and some lusty-voiced singer to raise the now-needed hymn: "Glory, Glory, Hallelujah!"—Delaware State News.

Banking Reform Next to Tariff
Laurence Laughlin, chairman of the National Citizens' League, of Chicago, for the promotion of a sound banking system, received a letter from Oscar W. Underwood, Democratic leader in the House of representatives, in which the Alabama man declared that the tariff was first and banking reform second as the big issues before the American people. The letter, in part, follows:
"In reference to future legislation, I believe that the foremost matter is an honest downward revision of the customs tariff taxes, and I believe that this revision should be entered upon at once and nothing allowed to interfere with it until it finally becomes a law."
"A matter that I consider of importance second only to that of tariff reform is a complete revision of the banking and currency system of the United States. It is possible that we have not progressed far enough at this time to arrive at a settlement of the measure that should be enacted, but it is certainly a matter which the Democrats must take up and settle."
The letter concluded by stating that Mr. Underwood favored a special session of Congress to take up the subject of the tariff.

Schrank in Insane
It was learned on excellent authority at Milwaukee last Thursday that the commission that has been examining John Schrank, who shot Colonel Roosevelt, will pronounce him a "paranoid." This means that he will be sent to the state asylum for the insane for life instead of being committed to the state prison for 15 years.

Tearing his shirt from his back, an Ohio man flagged a train and saved it from a wreck, but H. T. Aston, Raleigh, N. C., once prevented a wreck with Electric Bitters. "I was in a terrible plight when I began to use them," writes "my stomach, head, back and kidneys were all badly affected and my liver was in bad condition, but four bottles of Electric Bitters made me feel like a new man." A trial will convince you of their matchless merit for any stomach, liver or kidney trouble. Price 50 cents at Omar A. Jones' drug store.
